Mariner Flying To Venus

CAPE KENNEDY (AP) — Cracking a bigger Soviet space-ship with a two-day head start, America's Mariner 5 rocketed toward Venus today to stare with electronic sensors through the planet's veil of clouds.

Mariner went up at 11:01 p.m. EST Tuesday to begin the first U.S. planetary probe in more than 2½ years and the first to Venus since 1962.

The goal of the four-month trip is to see if living things can exist on Venus, where the U.S. has never landed a spacecraft and the Russians have dropped one.

Russia's Venus 4 got a head start Monday but space scientists were unwilling to predict which would reach Venus first. Venus 4 is a landing try but Mariner 5 will hopefully fly within 2,000 miles and then circle around the planet.

SUFFERN, N.Y. (UPI) — The chief leaders of the U.S. Negro civil rights movement Tuesday night ended a two-day closed meeting on ways of unifying the movement.

No statement followed the meeting, which came as racial rioting flared in several cities. Delegates included Rev. Martin Luther King and officials of the NAACP, CORE and other groups.

In Washington, President Johnson said his administration is trying to hold down racial tensions "but we have to rely principally on the good judgment of the people themselves."

In Cincinnati, more than 200 Ohio National Guardsmen were called out Tuesday night to quell racial disorders in that city and outlying areas — the city's second night of violence.

The troops were called in after disturbances spread over a wide area of the city and into suburban Norwood, and at least six persons were reported injured.

During the early part of the rioting police arrested two men. A crowd charged the police and the prisoners escaped.

ARSON BLAMED

In Tampa, Fla., arsonists set fires at three buildings and a lumber yard in Negro areas Tuesday night within hours after Sheriff Malcolm Beard "took a chance" and pulled out National Guard troops and police reinforcements, the fire department said.

Beard said he took the withdrawal action after meetings with several hundred Negro residents who promised there would be no trouble if extra police were removed.

WATTS CALM

Calm returned to the predominantly Negro Watts district in Los Angeles, after a night in which 500 Negroes threw rocks and bottles at firemen fighting a $35,000 fire.

While the area appeared quiet, police were keeping an eye on it.

New Wilson Man Rhodesia-Bound

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Wilson announced Tuesday Britain will try again to reach a settlement with Rhodesia on the independence issue.

He is sending former Conservative Commonwealth minister Lord Alport to Salisbury in a few days to study the possibility of new Wilson talks with Premier Smith. Alport cannot negotiate but simply will say if talks that might settle the matter are possible.

Smith said last week time was running out. He expects to receive in August a report of a constitutional commission which seems certain to recommend Rhodesia become a republic.

LIMA, Peru (Reuters) — A nude young lady crossing a road caused a blackout in a northern Lima suburb, it was reported Tuesday.

The newspaper La Prensa, which makes the claim and has a picture to go with it, says a car swerved and crashed into a utility pole when the girl crossed the road.

The suburb was blacked out.

One of two volleyball teams playing nearby abandoned the game to search a nearby corn field, and lost by default. It also failed to find the girl.

La Prensa's photograph shows a nude fleeing across a corn field.

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — A Russian drive for an emergency session of the UN General Assembly on the Middle East crisis has been stalled by the Western Big Three, it was learned Tuesday night.

Informed sources said the United States, France and Britain told Secretary-General U Thant they objected to the Soviet move because the council has been unanimous in all resolutions passed so far on the Middle East crisis and there is therefore no legal basis for claiming that the council is deadlocked.

FORCING EFFORT

The Western move was seen as an effort, before any assembly session, to force a vote in the Security Council on a Soviet motion demanding the condemnation of Israel as an aggressor and the unconditional withdrawal of Israeli forces from all occupied Arab territory.

The motion would certainly be defeated and the Soviet Union would clearly be going to the assembly because it had been beaten in the council.

NOTHING FURTHER

It was learned that, on legal grounds, Thant has held up action on the Soviet request for an emergency assembly session. It was understood no further steps would be taken until there is a decision in the council.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko requested the session in a letter to Thant under article 11 of the UN charter. It states that "the general assembly may discuss any questions relating to the maintenance of international peace and security brought before it . . . by the Security Council . . ."

COUNCIL DECISION NEEDED

Thant is said to have been told by his legal advisers that action under this article requires a formal decision by the council.

Gromyko declared in his letter that the 122-country assembly "should adopt a decision designed to bring about the liquidation of the consequences of aggression and the immediate withdrawal of Israeli forces behind the armistice lines" of 1948.

The communication started rumors that Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin might attend an emergency meeting of the assembly.

LEADING STATESMEN

The Gromyko letter to Thant said the Soviet government would send a delegation "including leading statesmen of the Soviet Union."

Gromyko normally would be expected to come to such a session, but diplomats believed he would not use this expression to describe himself.

If Kosygin should come, this would raise another question: Would the Soviet leader see President Johnson of the United States?

RESIST PRESSURE

In the Security Council, the Soviet Union reintroduced a demand that Israel withdraw unconditionally.

But Israel reaffirmed to the council its determination to resist pressure for an unconditional withdrawal. Israel envoy Mordecai Kidron denounced the Soviet motion as "destructive in intent, designed to restore the conditions of belligerence of blockade, of armed clashes, of sabotage and murder," with which Israel has had to contend since its creation in 1948.

SESSION ENDED

The General Assembly ended a special session Tuesday on the question of South African rule of South-West Africa and UN peacekeeping procedures.

Diplomatic observers said the emergency session requested by the Soviet Union could therefore take place without delay.

As soon as Ambassador Nikolai Fedorenko transmitted the government's request to U Thant, the secretary-general began asking all 122 member countries whether they agree to an emergency session.

Sixty-two countries must agree before such a session can take place. If and when Thant gets a 62nd affirmative reply, he must convene the session within 24 hours.

Moscow Urges Global Canal Control

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Soviet proposal to put all the world's major waterways, including the Panama Canal, under international control is being considered by U.S. state department planners, Congressional sources said Tuesday.

The Kremlin reportedly broached the plan to counter Israel's demand for free access to the Suez Canal, the Straits of Tiran and the Gulf of Aqaba. Israel is expected to demand unrestricted access to these waterways in the wake of its military victory over the Arab states.

Some Congressmen said the U.S. would probably be less reluctant than ever to give up Panama Canal control, since a new treaty on operations is being negotiated with the republic of Panama and major U.S. concessions are likely.

Russia reportedly will demand international control not only for the Suez and Panama canals, but also for the Kiel canal, Dardanelles, Danube River, Kattegatt and Skagerrak waterways and Malacca Straits separating Malaysia and Sumatra.

Gifts for War Victims Far Out of Balance

TORONTO (CF) — Two Toronto organizations put the Mideast war in perspective Tuesday when they announced their gifts to aid war victims in the Arab lands.

The Canadian Arab Committee announced $5,500 has been sent to the Red Cross for such work. The Israeli Survival Fund announced the first day's receipts of a Toronto campaign to buy medical supplies has been sent to Tel Aviv — $5,500,000.

Canada Votes No

OTTAWA (CF) — Canada would not support any UN resolution denouncing Israel as the aggressor in the Mideast war, Prime Minister Pearson told the Commons Tuesday.

He also said Canada, which is handling British affairs in Egypt due to a break in their diplomatic relations, will investigate reports four British cargo ships are stalled in the Suez Canal.

Johnson Mideast Advice: Let Things Clear Up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Johnson said Tuesday the best course in the Middle East is "to let things clear up and let the people of the area and the world realize what has happened."

After that "we will be examining the viewpoints of all concerned," the president told his first news conference since the Israeli-Arab war exploded.

Johnson again pledged U.S. policy to supporting the territorial integrity of all nations in the Middle East but said "how this will be effectuated will be determined by events in the days ahead."

"I think the people of the world should know that uppermost in my mind . . . in our people's minds, is trying to help people get along with their neighbors and each other," he said.

Johnson made these other points:

- The use of the hot line between the Kremlin and the White House saved time in the transmission of messages during the crisis, but except for this he did not see "a great deal of difference between this and ordinary communications."
- He declined to commit himself on whether the Arabs and Israelis should conduct face-to-face peace negotiations without outside participants.
- He would not predict whether a recent lull in ground fighting in Vietnam might signify an improvement in Soviet relations. "The fighting goes up and down, depending on a good many factors," he commented.

Arabian Losses 115,665

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Israel estimated Wednesday the Arab armies suffered at least 115,000 dead, wounded or captured during the brief Mideast war compared to 3,943 for Israel, a figure that included 678 killed.

Israel said total casualties were 65,000 for Jordan, 35,000 for Syria and, for Egypt, 10,000 dead, 3,000 captured and "uncounted many thousands" wounded.

Bobby

Kennedy Target Of Arabs

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Bobby Kennedy, not Lyndon Johnson, has become the chief target of Arab jibes at the UN during the Security Council debate on the Mideast crisis.

Saudi Arabia's Jamil Baroud, during his emotional attack Sunday on the American affinity for "Mammon," lashed the New York Democratic senator as an "upstart" and "son of a whisky merchant."

Tuesday, Jordan's Mohammed El Farra added of Kennedy:

"How can we find excuse for American politicians who aim at cheap political gains — for an American of high future ambitions who, instead of adopting the American sense of fairness, intervenes in the political affairs of 13 Arab states in an obvious attempt to accommodate the so-called Jewish vote?"

Everyone 'Loser' In War

From UPI, AP

LUXEMBOURG — U.S. Secretary of State Rusk sparked the first day of the NATO foreign ministers' annual spring meeting by saying flatly "everybody was a loser" in the Mideast war.

He urged an end to the "spiral in arms deliveries" there as a critical element for lasting peace.

Canada's External Affairs Minister Martin told the meeting direct talks between Israel and her Arab neighbors will solve the crisis. He said these negotiations should be "reinforced by UN pressure."

Most ministers supported such Israeli demands as the right to use the Suez Canal and Tiran Strait. Britain also suggested guarantees of Arab-Israeli frontiers, possibly by Russia, the U.S., Britain and France.

China Expels Indian Envoy

HONG KONG (Reuters)—Indian diplomat Krishnan Raghunath has been ordered to leave China immediately, Peking radio reported Tuesday.

The radio, in a broadcast monitored here, said Raghunath was tried in absentia by a people's court and found guilty of espionage activities. He was accused of photographing a "prohibited military area."

MASS TRIAL
The mass trial, attended by some 15,000 in Peking, also found P. Vijai, third secretary of the Indian embassy in China, guilty of espionage. He also was ordered to leave the country within three days, the broadcast said.

Radio Peking said Chinese Vice-Premier Han Nien-lung summoned Indian Charge d'Affaires Ram Sate this afternoon and told him of the court's decision.

Peking public security authorities had delivered a note to the Indian embassy Monday night ordering the Indian diplomat to present himself for trial in an indoor stadium. The demand was rejected by the Indians.

MOSCOW (Reuters)—The Soviet Union Tuesday protested to China against what it termed "unprovoked provocations" against the Russian Embassy in Peking.

The official news agency Tass said the protest was made in a note to the Chinese embassy in Moscow.

HOSTILE ACTIONS
It accused Chinese Red Guards of hostile actions against Soviet Diplomats and demanded that Chinese authorities take measures to ensure conditions of normal work and security for Russian officials in China, Tass said.

U.S. War Costs

Biggest Bill Ever

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The House Tuesday overwhelmingly adopted a $70,300,000,000 defence appropriations bill, swollen to record size by funds for the Vietnam war.

Passage followed debate in which demands were voiced for the United States to learn something from Israel about fighting wars and a proposal was made that the atomic bomb be dropped on North Vietnam if necessary.

Rep. George Andrews, (D-Ala.), joining several other

"hawks" in expressing dissatisfaction with U.S. strategy in Vietnam, said Israel did not care about the threat of Russian intervention when it fought the Arabs.

"If the United States continues to fight in Vietnam as it has for the past six years, it will be in Vietnam for another 20 years," he shouted.

"I think we can do it with conventional weapons, but frankly I have no compunction against using the big weapon to save the lives of our young

Civilians May Aid Shaky Nigeria

LAGOS, Nigeria (UPI)—Eleven civilians Tuesday took their places in the government of Maj. Gen. Yakubu Gowon in what appeared to be a final attempt to head off the complete collapse of Nigeria.

With civil war threatening over the secession of the eastern region—the self-styled republic of Biafra—and the western region threatening to break away as well, Gowon was seeking to make his government more broad-based than popular.

The civilians were the first to join the government since the nation's British-style parliamentary democracy fell in a brace of bloody military coups last year.

Pests Invade

BASTIA, Corsica (Reuters)—Swarms of locust have invaded western Corsica, devouring entire wheat fields and vineyards, it was announced here.

They will sit on the ruling executive council with six military men with Gowon as chairman and defence minister.

A twelfth civilian member—an easterner—has yet to be named.

Western chieftain Obafemi Awolowo was pulled into the council in an attempt to still secessionist talk in the western region. The popular Awolowo, formerly head of the parliamentary opposition, was made vice-chairman of the ruling body.

Soldiers Smoking Before Explosion?

UTRECHT, The Netherlands (UPI)—Government officials Tuesday investigated a report that soldiers were smoking on a munitions ship just before the vessel exploded, killing two persons and injuring more than 140 others.

Cor. Tomassen, 35, said he and another fisherman saw the soldiers smoking while loading 80 tons of obsolete mortar and artillery shells into the ship Monday at a dock a half mile from Utrecht.

"The soldiers began screaming 'Fire, fire.' They tried to put it out but it was no use," Tomassen said. "Then we heard some small bangs and moments later the ship went up."

The blast tore the vessel into three pieces and did extensive damage to nearby buildings. A welding factory was nearly demolished and an electric generator in a power station was knocked out. Thousands of windows were shattered.

Notable Performance

NOT EVERYONE AGREES with the way in which the B.C. government raises and disposes of its revenues, but none can fail to appreciate the remarkable financial and economic growth of the province.

The newly published annual green book of the Department of Finance, of course dominated by Mr. W. A. C. Bennett, premier and minister of finance, tells a story of growth that is the envy of the rest of Canada.

The Financial and Economic Review of the fiscal year 1966-67 provides an up-to-date picture of the situation as it is seen through the eyes of the premier.

The revenue of the province at $731,622,517 is up $74,984,333 from the previous year, and Mr. Bennett unflinchingly compares that figure with the $233,451,714 total revenue in 1952-1953, the year in which his government first took office.

Even in these inflationary days, the three-for-one increase is a notable performance.

Expenditures, too, have gone up correspondingly from $233,451,714 in 1953 to $645,750,989 a year ago, and to $695,589,587 this year.

In the new expenses are $25,000,000 for a new harbor board; $5,000,000 for culture and $5,000,000 for crop insurance, all authorized at the last sitting of the legislature.

In addition Mr. Bennett in his role of finance minister has wiped out the direct debt of the government over the years from $222,453,788 in 1952 to nil by 1960, mainly by transferring all funding matters to the government's various Crown Corporations including the goliath B.C. Hydro.

To those for whom heights and big strings of figures create dizziness the $1,205,246,345 owed by B.C. Hydro and the $143,403,912 by the Pacific Great Eastern, along with all the other contingent liabilities of the municipalities, can be a frightening matter.

However, the Crown corporations, with the exception of the PGE, are sustaining themselves and making a profit. Further the gross value of provincial assets has risen sharply to $1,550,132,876 and in the treasury there is, or was at fiscal year end, a surplus of $111,872,224—a more than tidy answer to Mr. Bennett's "pay-as-you-go" policymaking.

On the whole, therefore, and with reservations about some governmental attitudes mainly as they concern municipalities and education, the Economic Review reads all right.

For many the inference is that B.C. stands for Burgeoning Cornucopia.

Welcome Visitors

THIS EVENING two Japanese four-masted barques will arrive at Victoria under sail to be berthed at Ogden Point for the next six days.

For sailing buffs as well as others the goodwill visit of the merchant marine training ships Nippon Maru and Kaiwo Maru should be one of the more spectacular highlights of our local centennial celebrations.

Though conducted sight-seeing tours and entertainment at private homes for the ships' personnel have been arranged through the generosity of the local populace, our Japanese guests have determined that they will not be only on the receiving end of things.

During their stay here both ships will be open to the public at certain hours and their crews will demonstrate sail drill and other activities for visiting Victorians. The marine cadets will also give displays of judo and kendo and provide a band concert.

It is to be hoped that many Greater Victoria residents will avail themselves of the opportunity of welcoming our Japanese friends by taking some part in the activities planned for the coming week.

Low TV Ranking

AS A TELEVISION attraction the proceedings of the United Nations, even in a time of international crisis, do not rank very highly. Complaints were general last weekend when certain programs were pushed off the screen while in progress so that the Security Council debate might be aired.

On the balance of real values there should have been no irked viewers. This was an occasion of immense import to all, the attempt by the council to cope with a war and its responsibility to bring military operations to an end and move towards some settlement of the critical Middle East situation.

Most viewers would realize this, and probably defend their displeasure on the grounds that the UN debate was dull, hard to follow, and wearisome in repetitive argument. A later news summary of the proceedings, in crisp and positive assessment of what took place, would doubtless have been followed with intense interest.

It has to be said that UN debate doesn't screen well. The continual charge and counter-charge, the hardened attitudes of rival protagonists, none prepared to give an inch and each unwilling to believe the other, does in fact pall. Perhaps it shouldn't but it does. And it is confusing when two voices come through at the same time, one in a foreign tongue and the other in English translation, thus making it difficult to absorb the course of discussion.

Legislation in action, as illustrated by screening of UN deliberations, does not seem calculated to enhance the bulk of TV watchers.

There may be some hint here of what is in store if Parliament decides to open its chambers to the television cameras. It would be surprising if after the initial novelty wore off TV fare of this kind could secure a lasting grip on the attention of a sizable audience.

One won't question that it might be a good thing if it could, but people can be easily bored and debates that seem to get nowhere can be tiring and uninteresting.

Especially when these can be "wrapped up," to use a favorite TV cliché, by commentaries which report the meat of debate and what action has been taken by the governing bodies concerned.

Long Time No See

Pushing Us into Pigeonholes

The Monster Machine in Ottawa

From an address by Senator M. Wallace McCutcheon at a luncheon in Sudbury

IN Ottawa today there is a concerted effort under way to change Canadian society in a major departure from what we, our parents and our parents' parents found most attractive when arriving in Canada.

Contrast Canada and its development with that of any other nation in the world and I know you will agree with me that the most wonderful feature of this country is what I call the Open Society. It was the attraction of an open society with room for the individual to build himself and the future of his family in any healthy way his heart might want that brought the first citizens here, the waves of immigrants after the First World War and in more recent years.

Our forefathers, and many of you people here, ran from regimentation (in my grandfathers' case from starvation) to freedom. There are many Canadians who can look back on old world societies that were considered free, which failed to provide any opportunities for the individual. They can look back on earlier generations that were never permitted to rise above their station—and the station invariably was about as low down the pole of society as you could be pushed. Then someone had the foresight to look across the Atlantic to a nation of terrible physical obstacles—solid and fast, mountains, heavy forests, all kinds of discomforts—and say to himself: "If I am willing and able I can achieve something. I can make something of myself. I can break the vicious circle that has controlled my life and that of my parents."

Men and women came to Canada. In this area, men worked in the mines at brute labor. Today, mining is a skill and the individual initiative of the past developed the Canadian miner as the best in the world. Today, Sudbury is a major Canadian city. The children and the grandchildren go to good schools and have the opportunity to achieve their full potential in whatever field they choose.

Canada has grown because of individual initiative, because of the sudden release of abilities hidden and obstructed for generations in other parts of the world. Nowhere in the world has such an open society with opportunity for the individual existed as in Canada. This open society is a wonderful thing because to my mind it has been the reason for the growth of Canada to its present stage. I want my children and my grandchildren to have the same opportunities that I have had. I want Canada to continue to be an open society providing unlimited opportunity to all who are willing.

But what have we found in recent years? What have you experienced that has frustrated your view of the kind of Canada you want? More and more, and day by day, there has been a whittling away—an insidious nibbling that is pushing us into neat little pigeonholes, that is taking away our chances to show individual initiative and to achieve something for ourselves and the future.

I know the kind of thinking and planning that is resulting in this pigeonholing, in this codifying of each of us as nothing but a number that is fed into a monster machine in Ottawa. Let me assure you that this is a deliberate effort that stems from the kind of thinking that even has its own language—"planning," "disadvantaged," and many other six-syllable examples of officialdom and gobbledygook.

What is happening to you and me is a dangerous trend towards what I call a closed society. This is a society, a way of life, where we become ciphers, where our discretion, and the possibility of making a choice, is removed from us.

You cannot want this future for your children. But there is a group of people, in the seats of power, that is trying to bring about, in the name of progress, the very thing that I do not like simply because they think it is good for us—like a dose of castor oil poured down our throats!

They are insidious and devious. You need only look at some of the leaders in the present government to see what I mean. Their attitude is that they know best—like the Mandarins of ancient China who forced their notion of what China should be, down the throats of the people and eventually led that nation to disaster. Their attitude is that the experts know best. But they are pseudo-experts—if they push a button here, pull a lever there, confuse us with double-talk, they can make you and I do as the so-called experts dictate. It is not for you or me to decide what is best for us, but for the leaders of the closed society to decide what is best.

Surely you don't want to be pushed and pulled in every direction but the one you want to take. Surely you don't want to be considered a statistic to be fed into a giant computer, to be labelled and stamped by an ever-ballooning bureaucracy.

Surely you don't want to choose a closed society in preference to an open society that will provide opportunities for your children and grandchildren and which will build a better Canada. I cannot believe you willingly will continue to acquiesce in the insidious developments which take more and more choices away from you...

Soviet Polar Research

By Nevost Press Agency

THE technology of our times is altering the conventional age of old notions about the laws of nature, about the character and extent of their influence on man's social relations. The oceans, once seemingly infinite and enigmatic, no longer separate nations, rather they serve as a connecting medium and facilitate the progress of mutually beneficial exchanges of goods and opinions.

The paramount part of the world ocean in the life of mankind, the opportunity of a thoughtful development of its potential and the extension of transport routes is illustrated in a number of ways in numerous national pavilions at Expo 67 and at the Man-the-Explorer pavilion.

With the Arctic waters washing the shores of the northern coast of the Soviet Union for almost half the globe and up to 30 degrees in latitude, no wonder that the U.S.S.R. pavilion also has exhibits devoted to this topic.

Soviet researchers have always concentrated their attention and effort to make a seaway possible between the Sea of Barents and the Far Eastern ports of the U.S.S.R. Almost half a century of research—interrupted by four years of war—and daring expeditions have laid the groundwork to what is today the lifeline of the northern seas of the Soviet Union.

The modest "hydrographic expedition" established by a Lenin's decree evolved in later years into a great organization called the All-Union Institute of Arctic and Antarctic Studies.

This giant enterprise made possible the pioneering work of such ice-breakers as Sibiryakov (1932), Chelyudkin (1933) and Litke (1934) which paved the way for the first commercial cruises along the northern sea route.

The first polar research station led by world-known explorer Ivan Papanin was set up on drifting ice-floe which covered with its personnel some 2,000 miles during a period of nine months.

Concomitantly the St. George Sedov cruised in the central polar basin of the Arctic Ocean. In 1941 a Soviet four-engine aircraft, N-169, reached the area of the pole of relative inaccessibility, the most distant point from the dry land, but the outbreak of the Second World War stopped short these important experiences for nine full years.

In 1950, a year-long expedition, North-Pole II, was again successfully organized. The short far-northern summer is the busiest season for the Northern Sea, boats which carry hundreds of thousands of tons of cargo vital for the supply of people living there. To ensure the smooth operation of the carriers a wide network of hydrometeorological stations, weather services, fuel depots and polar airports has been set up. A large fleet of ice-breakers led by flagship the Lenin—a nuclear-driven ice-breaker—keeps the northern route open.

The question of lengthening the navigation period of the northern sea route and its use for international shipping is under consideration. These further steps depend on the commissioning of a new atomic and several diesel-electric ice-breakers now in construction destined to open new horizons and new daring exploits for those who had pioneered the Arctic Ocean for half a century—Soviet scientists and seamen.

Annually, two or more drifting stations are organized supported by aircraft ice-patrols.

As a result of the comprehensive researches it had been possible to develop rapidly a vast region extending from Murmansk to Kamchatka, an area measuring some 10,000 miles in width and 3,000 miles in depth, with winters lasting seven to eight months.

In a very impressive documentary shown at the pavilion "Man-the-Explorer" one can see that the landscape of this region is generally tundra and occasionally forest-tundra, taiga and permafrost, abounding in untold resources of coal, oil, gold, tin, nickel, lead, etc. Thanks to these rich deposits, industrial complexes and mining industries were set up. With their emergence towns of over 100,000 people have sprung up—Norilsk, Magadan and Yakutsk—at the mouths of Ob, Lena and Yenisei rivers.

Time for Canadian Confidence

From the Daily Packet and Times, Orillia

IT is to be hoped that the excitement and enthusiasm generated by Canada's hundredth year will give Canadians in the future the confidence in their national institutions and traditions which has been so conspicuously absent in the recent past. For among politicians, teachers, commentators and the intellectuals of the so-called New Left, it has become fashionable to denigrate the political institutions and belittle the standards and values on which this nation was built, and to seek instead to emulate those of other people in other countries, especially in the United States. In particular, there has grown up the notion that the republican system of government, as evolved in the United States, is somehow more democratic than our own constitutional monarchy, which is usually depicted as an unnecessary and humiliating survival from a colonial past, a hence embarrassing to a full-fledged self-governing nation as we feel ourselves to be.

Nothing, of course, could be further from the truth, and as we embark on our second century of nationhood it is time Canadians realized and appreciated the very real advantages they presently enjoy. Without attempting a detailed comparison of the relative merits of the parliamentary system, as adopted in Canada, with the republican system in vogue in the United States, it can be truly said that freedom of the individual is the basis of law and legislation in Canada, to an extent impossible in the United States, where the need to preserve a strong and viable federal government as well as a degree of autonomy for the individual states, has been an overriding and continuing consideration.

The plain truth is that, for all its republican institutions and revolutionary background, the United States today is an ultra-conservative, conformist society; the principal upholder of the status quo in a world of revolutionary change. Compared with the frozen attitudes and conformist tendencies of American society, Canada today enjoys an undreamed-of freedom of thought, expression and action, and a freedom, moreover, which is both created and protected by the very legal and political institutions which it is now so fashionable to mock.

After a hundred years, surely we Canadians should have learned the enormous value of our libertarian heritage, vested in a system which provides us with the continuity and mystique of monarchy, the self-rule of an elected parliament of the people, and the supremacy of the individual as the basis of our laws. This system, evolved over a thousand years of human experience, is our most valuable asset; to dissipate it in the mindless meddling of politicians, bent on asserting their "Canadianism" by discarding every legacy from our past, however valuable, would be to dissipate freedom itself.

Centennial Review

Canada and Its Allies

By GARMAN CUMMING from Ottawa

NATURE designs that this whole continent... shall be, sooner or later, within the magic circle of the American union."

State Secretary William Seward preached that doctrine confidently in Boston 100 years ago as Canadians were making a country and so thwarting nature's design.

In a sense, Confederation was conceived not so much to get away from England as to stay away from the United States. The history of its first century has been one of gradually pulling away from Britain while at the same time holding the United States at arm's length.

But even in Centennial Year, Seward's words return to haunt Canadians as they look at the weight of American cultural and economic domination and ask whether his prediction eventually will be borne out.

At the same time they are embarrassed, although they don't much like to talk about it, by the need to go cap-in-hand to London to change their own constitution.

Whole libraries have been written on Canada's tangled, sometimes neurotic, attitudes towards its two big allies.

Historian J. B. Brebner called it the North Atlantic Triangle.

Canadians sometimes have thought of it as a North Atlantic tennis game—with Canada the ball.

Off and on, they have prided themselves on being the "linchpin" of the alliance—the honest broker, the interpreter between giants.

At other times tempers have burned over real or imagined attempts by the big allies to push Canada around.

The fear was real enough at the time of Confederation when the "manifest destiny" of the United States to rule the continent still had popular impact.

Official Washington often cast glances northward as it felt its new military muscles during and after the Civil War.

In 1861 the New York Herald was thundering that when the war was over, "four hundred thousand thoroughly disciplined troops will take no better occupation than to destroy the last vestiges of British rule on the American continent, and annex Canada to the United States."

Five years later the Chicago Tribune was promising that if there was ever another war with Britain, Canada would be "snatched up by this republic as quickly as a hawk would gobble a quail."

The Irish-American Fenians, meanwhile, were harassing Britain with raids across the border to the tune of a marching song that proclaimed:

"We'll go and capture Canada, for we've nothing else to do."

Officially, Washington frowned on the raids, although there were serious suggestions that Britain should turn Canada over to the Americans to settle for damage caused by British support of the southern rebels during the Civil War.

In the late 1860s, Britain was working eagerly to patch things up with the Americans and sometimes regarded Canada as a nuisance blocking this aim.

Canadians on the other hand sometimes looked on Britain as a mother who was selling them out piece by piece to a rival.

The Washington Treaty of 1871 settled a long agenda of Anglo-American differences but left Canadians feeling short-changed on their demands for protection of the east coast fisheries and on other issues.

Sir John A. Macdonald signed the treaty—as a British representative—not as a Canadian prime minister—with the comment: "Well, here go the fisheries."

Canada had no independent control of her defence or external policies until well into the 20th century and her dependent status often ranked.

In 1882 Edward Blake, the great Liberal politician, declared: "The history of the diplomatic service of England, as far as Canada is concerned, has been a history of error, blunder, wrong and concession."

Two years later Macdonald himself, although he prided himself on British citizenship, refused to send troops for

Britain's Khartoum expedition, saying: "The Suez Canal is nothing to us."

Canada's feeling of being a victim of American pressure and British wavering was strengthened by the Alaska Panhandle border settlement of 1903, when Britain's representative on a six-man tribunal sided with three Americans to out-vote two Canadians.

Prime Minister Laurier denounced American "grasping" and said Canadians in future should settle such problems "in our own fashion."

As the century turned, there still were Americans who wanted to see a land link over Canada with Alaska, but this sentiment had faded as Confederation became a coast-to-coast reality.

Increasingly, Canadian-American problems centred on trade. Politicians agonized over reciprocity or protection, free trade or tariffs.

American capital rolled in and Ottawa welcomed it, at the same time feeling nervously that it might be selling its soul for a mess of pottage.

And not only capital rolled in. People, ideas, institutions were imported wholesale from the United States as well as from Britain.

On the government level, relations with Britain developed into a gradual campaign for independence.

At the start of the century Canadian troops were fighting the Boers in South Africa, although Canada had had no part in events leading up to the war. French-Canadians, led by editor-politician Henri Bourassa, protested that the England's wars were none of Canada's affairs.

The First World War marked a profound turning point in relations with Britain.

While more than 60,000 Canadians were dying in Europe, Prime Minister Borden demanded an increasing role in control of Canadian troops.

And at the end of the war he held out for a separate Canadian delegation at the Paris peace talks and at the League of Nations.

Canada at that point still had not assumed full control of its external relations, but it was firmly on the road.

Economic integration with the United States also seemed to be on an irreversible path as an American investment, already amounting to $700,000,000 in 1914, was nearly doubled by 1920.

In the ensuing years Canada tended to turn inward on herself, partly in revulsion against European militarism that had cost so many Canadian lives.

In part at least the isolationist trend grew from the feeling that the country could not stand a renewal of the French-English bitterness over the draft that had marked the last years of the war.

In 1922, when Britain invited Canadian help to meet a Turkish threat at Chanak in Asia Minor, Prime Minister King refused.

Conservative Leader Meighen said Canada should have responded with a "Ready, steady, go" and won cheers in Toronto. But in Quebec, where King's strength was based, the rejection won warm approval.

In the 20s also, Canada began to assert its independence by opening its own foreign embassies—the first in Washington in 1927—and by signing its own treaties.

Increasingly, Canadians were chafing at direction from London.

There was a typical outburst in a 1926 letter to King from big fish commissioner in London, P. C. Larkin. He complained that the British treated Canadians as "rebellious children" who had to be "whipped into obedience."

The imperial conference of 1926 and the resulting Statute of Westminster in 1931, spelled out the independence and equality of senior members of the empire.

But as late as 1938 there were Canadian parliamentarians who demanded a fully independent status.

In that year the government opened legations in Belgium and Holland and Toronto Conservative T. L. (Tommy) Church reacted angrily.

"I wish to protest this sort of thing," he said in the Commons. "... If we are a separate country, let us get out of the British Empire."

The outbreak of the Second World War confirmed the independent status as the decision to enter was made by Parliament a full week after Britain's entry.

The war also brought Canada to the height of its role as interpreter between Britain and the U.S., although that contribution faded with American entry and the increasing closeness between Churchill and Roosevelt.

In the post-war years Canadians fought again with the Americans and British in Korea and co-operated closely with them in NATO and the United Nations.

But the rules had changed: In the Suez crisis of 1956 and in the Vietnam war, Canadian governments made clear that support of the allies would be based on Canadian interests and no longer would be automatic.

Canada Tries To Woo Arabs

By RONALD LEBEL, from Ottawa

Having supported Israel's basic position in the Middle East confrontation, Canada now seeks to repair its battered relations with the Arab world.

The shift in emphasis was signalled Tuesday by Prime Minister Pearson in the Commons and by External Affairs Minister Martin at the NATO ministerial meeting in Luxembourg.

The prime minister referred to the plight of Arab refugees as an "agonizing problem" and said the United Nations will have to take "much more action" to solve it.

"We will certainly play our part," he added.

External affairs officials said they are considering an emergency program to extend food and material aid to Arabs displaced by the Middle East fighting last week and in previous campaigns.

These Arab refugees number more than 1,000,000 and are afflicted by poverty, hunger, illiteracy and unemployment. Not surprisingly, they are vulnerable to leadership by militant anti-Israel extremists.

The Canadian government regards the solution of the refugee problem as a prerequisite for lasting peace in the Middle East. As a first step, Canada is ready to make a substantial contribution to an emergency aid program run by the UN or by the International Red Cross, hoping many other countries will do the same.

Officials stressed, however, that discussions on this idea are in the early stages and that no requests for aid have come through from Arab countries.

In Luxembourg, meanwhile, Mr. Martin urged NATO countries to improve their relations with Arab countries. He also favored direct peace talks between Israel and her Arab neighbors.

Canada's relations with the Arab world moved last month when President Nasser of Egypt accused the Pearson government of being pro-Israel and gave the Canadian contingent in the disbanded UN Emergency Force 48 hours to leave Egypt.

An official Cairo newspaper went so far as to call Mr. Pearson an "idiot" because he favors a continued UN presence along Israel's borders with Jordan, Egypt, Syria and Lebanon.

Observers here believe the Arab governments were displeased with Mr. Pearson's public statements supporting Israel's right to live as a state without harassment and it's right of free passage through the Gulf of Aqaba.

This attitude by the government has been fully endorsed by all opposition parties in Parliament and remains Canadian policy. But officials emphasize that Canada wants strong UN action to bring about permanent solutions in the Middle East. They deny that the government is anti-Arab.

BYRON ROSS

By RAYMOND HEARD, from Washington

The critics of President Johnson—Republicans as well as Democratic "doves"—have begun an inquest into why President Johnson appeared to waffle while the Middle East burned.

The discussion, although no one will admit it, is obviously related to next year's election. It is based on two rather broad assumptions.

The first of these is that Johnson has no such thing as a foreign policy in the classical sense of the term, but regards foreign affairs as part and parcel of all he does at home.

The second is that the Jewish vote in six of the big states—among them New York, California, Pennsylvania and Illinois—is large enough to make the difference between defeat and victory in a close presidential election. There are 5,600,000 Jews in America, but their influence far outweighs their number and they are concentrated in the great urban centres of the East Coast, the Mid-West and the West Coast.

It remains to be seen how vulnerable Johnson is to charges that he exercised poor judgment in the Arab-Israeli crisis. But his plight whatever it may be, would have been worse if he had not gambled on a quick Israeli success.

If the Israeli blitzkrieg had not worked, he would have been forced to be much more specific about fulfilling the commitments of four presidents, including himself, to protect Israel's sovereignty and independence.

He Played It Cool

The Israeli triumph, of course, allowed the president, who shot first and asked questions afterwards in the Dominican Republic and Vietnam, to "play it cool." He was also the model of restraint. But this will not necessarily get him off the domestic political hook.

Quite the most fascinating aspect of the post-mortem on the Middle East crisis is the way leading Vietnam "doves" and "hawks" have switched roles. Many who counselled de-escalation in Vietnam, have cried for action to put Nasser in his place.

Senator Wayne Morse, of Oregon, who on Vietnam is the most vocal dove, recommended at an early stage that U.S. ships should be sent through the Strait of Tiran "with their flags flying."

Another dove, Senator Eugene McCarthy, the Minnesota Democrat—who was runner-up to Hubert Humphrey in the 1964 contest for the vice-presidency—said the U.S. had "a clear obligation... to fulfill our own commitments" to Israel.

Meantime, such unrelenting Southern hawks as Senator Richard B. Russell and Representative L. Mendel Rivers, chairmen of the armed services committees, cautioned against the U.S. going it alone in the Middle East, although they would like to see North Vietnam bombed back into the Stone Age.

In the Middle East debate, some of the doves, especially those who fear defeat in the 1968 election, are using the very words and slogans which President Johnson and Secretary of State Dean Rusk, have employed to justify their stand in South-east Asia—"commitment," "pledge," "resistance to aggression."

Policy by Analogy

For some time Washington has been discussing, and even making, foreign policy by analogy. Messrs. Rusk and Johnson have compared their Vietnam critics with the "appeasers" at Munich, and Ho Chi Minh with Hitler.

In the early hours of the Israeli-Arab conflict, some of the doves reversed the charges, claiming that the Administration was "appearing" the neo-Nazi, Nasser.

Those who recommended a tough line in the Middle East insisted there was a much clearer commitment to defend Israel than there ever was to take over South Vietnam's war against communism.

The United States, they added, is fighting to bolster a demonstrably unrepresentative dictator in Saigon, President Diem.

No Simple Pattern

But the debate does not break down into a simple hawk versus dove pattern.

Members of both parties particularly the Republicans reacted to telegrams from constituents urging resistance to state department spokesman Robert McCloskey's statement, revised by the White House, that the U.S. was "neutral in thought, word and deed."

Senator Charles Percy, the youthful-looking Illinois Republican who is regarded as a potential 1968 presidential candidate, said, "I cannot feel neutral when a dictator threatens to drive a free people into the sea."

Another Republican hopeful, California's Governor Ronald Reagan, who appeared Sunday at a rally in Hollywood in support of Israel, charged that the real villain is the Soviet Union, which "is probably an anti-semitic as was the Nazi regime."

Other Republicans said the U.S. was "caught napping" by the crisis and that the Democrats are to blame for not cutting off all aid to the United Arab Republic.

Although firm positions have not been taken yet it is quite possible that the Republicans will crusade for a permanent solution to the Middle East crisis which would give Israel the right of passage through both the Suez Canal and the Gulf of Aqaba. The realities of the situation may make it difficult, if not impossible, for President Johnson to go this far.

Educated Guess Gave Victory to Israelis

By ANDREW WILSON From London

ing the Strait of Tiran, on Tuesday.

The first Israeli ground advance, mounted by infantry, was on the Gaza Strip, captured in a day. Thereafter the southern battle was exclusively an armored one. The Israelis had some 600 tanks against Egypt's 1,000.

One Israeli spearhead raced along the coast road towards El Qantara. Others struck on roads farther south, towards Iamalia and Port Taufiq. The main Egyptian tank concentration was engaged in northeast Sinai on Tuesday and was destroyed within 24 hours.

By the fourth day (Thursday) the Israeli armor had pushed on to the Suez Canal itself, making a double envelopment of the "second line" of Egyptian forces defending a triangular position some 40 miles to the east. Trapped in a pocket, the Egyptian army was now mercilessly eliminated.

Meanwhile, Israeli infantry had moved into Jordan across the long eastern border, striking first into the Jordanian salients of Nablus and Hebron and then taking the old City of Jerusalem.

On the northern front, the Syrians, as Israeli planners had expected, were comparatively inactive.

The fate of the other Arab forces? Iraqi troops were engaged on both the Syrian and Jordanian fronts, but were never a serious factor in Israeli estimation. Kuwaiti troops had been sent by Nasser to defend Sharm El-Sheikh, where they were captured. The Algerians and Saudis never reached the battlefield.

One of the mysteries remaining after the war is why the Egyptians made no use of their much-vaunted missile command, with an estimated 100 rockets, the 235-mile-range Al Zafir and the bigger Al Kahir, with a range of 375 miles.

But there can be little mystery about the collapse of Egyptian morale. The Israelis had planned on the assumption that, if the Egyptian command could be "knocked off balance," it would lose all control, and that there would be insufficient initiative among the lower echelons to keep the war going.

Negro Named to Supreme Court; Appointment Fails to Cause Stir

President Johnson, left, announces appointment of first Negro to U.S. Supreme Court. Thurgood Marshall, who before his appointment was solicitor-general, stands by President's side. Ceremony took place yesterday at White House.

By THOMAS J. FOLEY From Washington

The most significant political repercussion of President Johnson's appointment of a Negro to the highest court in the land Tuesday may well turn out to be the very lack of repercussion.

The prevalent view of Washington politicians on the naming of Thurgood Marshall to the Supreme Court seemed to be that it holds little plus or minus politically for Johnson.

Coming 17 months before the national elections, it was said, the political effect of the appointment is likely to be reflected next year more through Marshall's position as a justice than the fact that a Negro has been named.

And since the appointment has generally been accepted as meritorious, the prevailing opinion is that Marshall's court performance will be a credit to him, and thus indirectly to his race.

Whether Johnson will win more Negro votes because he has named a Negro to the Supreme Court is an open question. Negro voters are more likely to be influenced by more tangible and immediate factors such as the administration's success in the war on poverty.

On the other hand, adverse reaction to the appointment from white voters disturbed about Negro demonstrations may be dissipated by the likely presidential candidacy of former Alabama governor George Wallace.

Democratic politicians hope, and Republicans fear, that the public opinion polls are correct in showing that those who would vote for Wallace would not vote for Johnson anyway. Thus he is hurting the Republicans more than the Democrats.

Some Negro leaders said they believe the Marshall appointment may cause many Negroes in doubt about who they should follow to turn away from the Stokely Carmichael and toward more moderate leaders.

Tensions Reach To Expo

MONTREAL (CP)—The tensions of the Middle East left their mark Tuesday on Tunisia's national day festivities at the world's fair.

The dispute between the Arabs and Israelis forced cancellation of a visit to Canada and Expo 67 by Habib Bourguiba Jr., Tunisian foreign affairs minister, who was represented by Bechir Ennagi, the country's minister of industry and commerce.

Mr. Ennagi, whose party was welcomed to Place des Nations with a 18-gun salute, promptly handed over the Tunisian pavilion to the city of Montreal, after expressing his regret that President Habib Bourguiba himself could not be present.

SALARIES
While Arab-Israeli tensions continued, Expo's labor relations experts and student representatives looked into accusations that some employees are exploiting student help by not paying adequate salaries and wages.

The students, represented by l'Union generale des etudiants du Quebec, a French-language student union, said the charges of exploitation are aimed at operators of some boutiques and concessions rather than against Expo itself.

Tunisia's was the seventh pavilion to be promised to Montreal after the close of Expo in October. Other pavilions presented to Montreal were those of Ethiopia, Iran, Belgium, Mauritius, the United States and the Atlantic provinces.

Nancy Greene of Roseland, B.C., the world's top woman skier, paid a visit Tuesday to Olympic House at Expo for the world premiere of a film about herself.

EDISON, N.J. (UPI)—Honor student Micah Berlin, 18, who fought for and won the right to wear sideburns to his graduation, stressed the principle of individual rights Monday night in his two-minute valedictory speech.

Berlin was suspended from Edison High School because he refused to cut his sideburns, which are an inch or so longer than normal, and the local school board denied him permission to take part in graduation ceremonies. But the state board of education overturned that decision.

"The principle of individual right has been one of the foundations of our democracy," said Berlin who also was president of his class. "We must always have respect for the individual, while retaining respect for the rights of others."

He said his class "is aware of the problems and injustices that exist and it is concerned with the welfare of our fellow man."

Excellent Showcase

300 Dance in Revue

A centennial dance revue offered by the Vivian Briggs studio played to a full house Tuesday in the McPherson Playhouse.

More than 300 children took part in the show which offered an excellent showcase for the youngsters.

The first half of the performance is given over to a dream sequence that offered scope for imaginative scenery and choreography.

The closing half was taken up with more modern fare that ranged from Mary Poppins to Rachmaninoff.

Howard Denike sustained the pace with his pit orchestra so that there were few flat spots in the nearly three hours of dancing.

Vivian Briggs and her assistants Velda Scoble, Rae Burns and Mary Spilsbury produced a fine offering.

Guest artists Marge Bridgman, George Marshall and Allison Cummings helped provide a touch of variety to the program.

Would-Be Robbers Just Couldn't Click

MONTREAL (CP) — Three would-be bank robbers Tuesday probably are wishing they had stayed in bed. It just wasn't their day.

Things went wrong right from the start as they attempted to rob a branch of the Provincial Bank of Canada in north-end Montreal. First, their planned holdup was averted by the alertness of the bank manager who saw the men drive up and put on their hoods.

The manager, Laurent Pellegrino, sounded the alarm and ordered his employees to lock their cash drawers.

The bandits, all of them armed, burst into the bank and ordered everyone to "stay put."

While one held everyone at bay with an automatic rifle, the other two jumped the counter and tried to open the cash drawers with their hands. They pulled so hard the handles snapped off.

When they realized the holdup was fruitless they fled, but, in doing so, one of the trio dropped the keys to his getaway car on the floor of the bank.

The bandits jumped into their car and, when they could not find the keys, jumped out again and stole a bank customer's car.

Two of the bandits left the car a short distance away but were spotted by a police cruiser. They were taken into custody.

The driver continued with the car and was being sought by police.

West Turns Down Oil Emergency

PARIS (Reuters) — Twenty Western countries and Japan ended a two-day conference on oil supplies here Tuesday night with a decision against declaring an immediate oil emergency because of the Middle East crisis, conference sources said.

The oil companies of the 21-nation Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development formulated a report to be submitted to the organization's executive committee here later this week.

Details were kept secret but the sources said the report mainly concerned technical details of Western oil supplies and did not recommend immediate activation of the emergency oil measures laid down after the 1956 Suez crisis.

It suggested that emergency measures, including the pooling of Western tankers and oil stocks, to be held in readiness.

Johnson Blocked Separatist Drive

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Daniel Johnson said Tuesday that between 1962 and 1966 he resisted strong pressures to make the Union Nationale a separatist party.

'PRESSURE' Mr. Johnson said the pressures were exerted by leading Quebec separatists and by agitators within the Union Nationale disgruntled by election losses.

Stratford

Festival Farce Praised

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — Tony Van Bridge and William Hutt dominated Michael Langham's production of The Inspector General at the Stratford Shakespearean festival Tuesday night.

Mr. Langham, reducing this year after 12 seasons as festival director, combined slapstick farce with glimpses of savagery.

The plot rattled along briskly and even the scene changes were done under a flickering spotlight, suggesting a stop-motion movie.

The story of the play, written by Nikolai Gogol in Russia in 1836, concerns a penniless city slicker mistaken for an inspecting official by the corrupt rulers of a provincial town. The slicker departs with a pocketful of bribes, one jump ahead of the real inspector.

The script was prepared by Peter Raby with music by Raymond Pannell and costumes and set by Leslie Hurry.

Militant Mothers Aim at Gagliardi

LYTTON (CP) — Militant mothers in this central B.C. community plan to take their complaints about mumme Fraser River crossing to Highways Minister Gagliardi. A spokesman said a boycott of classes by students ended Tuesday but the women are taking up a Gagliardi campaign instead.

Sooke school board Tuesday night approved use of the basement room at Port Renfrew as a private kindergarten if a proposed building program for area Indians is to be carried through. It was reported the band has a five-year community development project for the district.

Dr. Charles Pitt, a student of agricultural economics, will join the University of Victoria's department of anthropology and sociology this fall. It was announced Tuesday.

Dr. Pitt, 28, a New Zealander, comes from the London School of Economics.

KHARTOUM (Reuters) — Sudanese bank employees walked out of all foreign banks here Tuesday, forcing them to close. The employees demanded immediate nationalization of the banks.

Suit Follows Sea Crash

VANCOUVER (CP) — Alaska Cruise Lines Ltd., whose vessel Glacier Queen was in collision Friday with a Japanese freighter near Prince Rupert, Monday started a $200,000 damage suit against the freighter's owners.

The Nishiki Maru was en route from Kitimat to Japan with a full cargo when the collision occurred in fog, causing a 60-foot gash along the forward hull of the southbound cruise ship, carrying 90 passengers. Damage was estimated at $200,000.

Officers and crew from the ships gave evidence Monday at a Department of Transport inquiry in Prince Rupert. Further hearings are expected to be held in Vancouver or Victoria.

We anticipate every need and take full responsibility for every detail involved in final arrangements—giving to each our most careful attention.

Tiger Paws

It wasn't very long ago, you'll remember, that cars began to have names that sounded like sleek and ferocious jungle cats.

Well, Uniroyal is hardly a company to be caught napping. It realized instantly that cats need paws. And paws that are exactly as tough and agile as the cats themselves. So it developed Tiger Paws.

Tiger Paws were tested at over 120 m.p.h. for 500 miles, and run at 90 m.p.h. for 19,000 miles—both without failure. So much for toughness.

As for agility, Tiger Paws take corners with hardly a purr, let alone a squeal. On sharp curves, they give you a feel of the road you just can't get with ordinary tires. And you get these high-speed handling characteristics of a sports car without sacrificing the smooth, comfortable ride of a passenger car.

Tiger Paws also have another distinctive characteristic. They have a red circle around them. After all, who ever saw a tiger without a stripe?

Simpson-Sears Group Checks Centre Site

By HARRY YOUNG
Business Editor

The fellows who are footing the bill for a bird's eye view of what Mayor Hugh Stephen says will be the largest and most comprehensive shopping centre on Vancouver Island. The Board of Directors of the Simpson-Sears organization who had held a meeting in Vancouver Monday, came to Victoria in a caravan of shiny black limousines and alighted on the top of Mount Tolmie, from where they looked down upon the site of their new super department store enterprise.

For some of the directors it was a first look at the Hillside-Shellbourne complex, but not for others like Chairman Jack Barrow, General Robert Ellington Wood, Morgan Reid or Bruce Ward.

They were welcomed by the mayor, who has been conducting negotiations for the city to bring the noted Canadian-U.S. trading firm to Victoria.

"We have looked over the site carefully, and we feel sure we have picked the right spot," said Mr. Barrow. "We are also highly enthusiastic about Victoria's development, and we are going to get along with the project with the least possible delay."

He said he hoped the shopping centre would be open by early 1969.

Also enthusiastic was Morgan Reid, vice president of development and financing and Bruce Ward, the S.S. general manager of the company's retail operations in B.C.

Mr. Ward recalled that about 10 years ago Simpson-Sears had hoped to build a store on nearby Richmond.

"We were ready to go, but we ran into physical problems with Bowker Creek, and that set us back for some time," he said.

"The new site is near the old one, and it is what we wanted."

He added that while Simpson-Sears two storey interior mall type department store would be the centrepiece of the new complex, he hoped that there would be a very wide variety of other specialty stores, including a super-market.

"We are not afraid of competition," he said.

Asked if Dominion Stores, which holds options on adjacent property would be one of the associates, in the new centre, Mr. Reid said "I too would like to know."

Up to the moment Dominion has not made a decision, but

Mr. Reid said that if Dominion were not coming in, some other super-market chain would be invited.

Gen. Wood, who is a former chairman of Sears Roebuck (the U.S. half of Simpson-Sears), celebrated his 80th birthday at the S.S. directors' meeting in Vancouver. He said his connection with Vancouver Island was nothing new.

"I have a daughter (Mrs. H. W. Mitchell) who spends her summers on Salt Spring Island," he said. The sprightly old general from Chicago "frequently comes out to see her," said Mr. Reid.

"We are very pleased to have these people coming to Victoria," Mayor Stephen said, as he watched the directors embark and move off in their limousine cavalcade down the mountainside.

Goldstream's autumnal salmon run is a natural wonder and Vancouver Islanders should be encouraged to see this annual wildlife spectacular, Roderick Haig-Brown told conservationists here Tuesday.

He said that each fall carloads of people gather on the banks of Goldstream to watch the fish head upstream to the spawning grounds.

People should be encouraged to avail themselves of this opportunity to study the salmon in action, the internationally-known sportsman and conservationist said.

'AN ATTITUDE'

He was speaking to some 150 people at Beacon Hill Park's Finlayson Point. Among them were 25 professional conservationists from six Canadian provinces and 46 American states.

The visiting conservationists are attending the American Association for Conservation Information's 20th annual conference which started Monday at the Empress Hotel.

Mr. Haig-Brown said conservation is an attitude of the mind and if the attitude is not there legislation means very little.

CHILDREN

He cited the conservation values of showing children the various stages of fish development in a fish hatchery.

There is no better way of putting across the message of conservation than to speak to children, he said.

He told the gathering if Goldstream's salmon run could be developed and encouraged from a spectator viewpoint, then similar programs could be applied to other natural resources.

'REALITY'

Victoria landscape architect W. C. Yeomans told the conference that "society on the time to stop justifying all land protective management measurements 'solely on the basis of the buck'."

He spoke on effective bridges to an understanding of the international conservation crisis.

"Such bridges must become a reality or we will lose our already precarious foothold on the planet."

HARMONY

Mr. Yeomans said man has failed to create or protect the air, water, wildlife and more sensitive landscapes on a good portion of the globe in the competitive struggle for gain.

He cited three bridges: awareness, challenge and action.

Man must be led back to harmony with the landscape which he had ignored too long.

"Otherwise I am convinced we are on the road to extinction."

The conference continues at 8:30 a.m. today and will conclude at noon.

Welfare Tenants Allowed More Money

Increases of up to 50 per cent in rental allowances for persons on social welfare will go into effect July 1, Welfare Minister Campbell said Tuesday.

He said the increases were part of a major decentralization of the department. The increases will be made at the discretion of the field workers rather than headquarters here.

The present supplementary rental allowances range from $30 to $75 a month will be boosted to a minimum - maximum scale July 1 of $45 to $112.

"The allowances will be based on need," he said.

PEOPLE THERE

"We're trying to decentralize the decision-making process so that the field workers have more say because that's where the people are and social welfare program should be related to people."

Mr. Campbell also said he has issued instructions that the old age assistance board in the division of the aged be physically decentralized by fall.

It now comprises 77 staff members in a Vancouver headquarters office supervising the program throughout the province.

IN FIELD

"By fall, most of them will be sent out and re-located in eight regions," he said.

"We will keep a small administrative centre and a call-in office in Vancouver but most of the workers will be out in the field."

Holiday Issue Snubbed

The battle of provincial public health officers to keep the privilege of a month's holidays after one year of service was reflected Tuesday in discussions of the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health.

A letter over the signature of Mrs. A. B. Thompson, acting board chairman, which gave arguments in favor of retention of the month-long holiday, was not justified, board members decided.

The arguments were advanced without specific authority of the board and the letter should have dealt only with the placement and salary scales of provincial inspectors, as opposed to municipal people doing the same work.

For that reason the board refused to give its support to the letter and the action in writing.

"I'm not at all sure that I support the idea of a month's holidays for provincial inspectors, and I don't think the issue should have been discussed at all," said Coun. Edith Gunning of Saanich.

Prime Minister Here

B.C., Bavaria Hatching Trade Pacts?

By NANCY BROWN

Contrasts are on the point of being signed between Bavarian and British Columbian interests - Bavarian Prime Minister Dr. Alfons Goppel told a press conference here Tuesday, but he wouldn't say what kind of contracts.

Asked if they were in the shipping field, his minister of commerce and communications, Dr. Otto Schedl, answered simply "no comment."

The prime minister said Bavaria was most interested in the electronics field.

Dr. Goppel said he is in Canada to discuss common interests - commercial and economic interests - and trans-Atlantic tourism.

Dr. Schedl said people in Bavaria were interested in the abundant natural resources of B.C.

"You can build up a large production and sell in Germany with our help," he said.

"because we know the German and Bavarian markets."

Dr. Schedl said Bavarians were investing in Canada and added that there was no government control over overseas investments.

He mentioned the Alcan aluminum enterprise in Düsseldorf as an example of co-operation between the two countries.

Bavarian economies experts he felt, were very aware of British Columbia, especially since Premier Bennett's visit there last fall.

B.C. sells a lot of newspaper to Bavaria, as well as pulp to the pulp and paper mills.

Although there is no shortage of oil at present in the country, Bavaria would be interested in buying B.C. oil, the commerce minister said.

"Transportation is the difficulty," said Dr. Schedl. "If it is possible to get the crude oil at a reasonable price on the Bavarian market, then I would like to get it."

"You also have copper and a lot of minerals," he added. "You have it, and we need it."

"You also have a good market for our products, especially precision machinery and electronics."

Tracks Cleared for Merger

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Interstate commerce commission has cleared the tracks for the merger of the New York Central and Pennsylvania Railroads by ordering the Norfolk and Western Railway to take over three eastern lines.

Chairman William Tucker said the ICC found it "in the public interest" for the N and W to acquire the Erie-Lackawanna, Delaware and Hudson, and Boston and Maine Railroads.

Petitions by the Reading and the Central of New Jersey for consolidation of the Penn-Central merger with the N and W, Chesapeake and Ohio and other eastern merger cases was denied.

The Supreme Court ruled March 22 that the Penn-Central merger could not go through until the fate of the three small roads had been decided. The merger now could come as early as Aug. 1.

In a separate decision, the ICC ordered the Penn-Central system to make indemnity payments to the three small carriers if their inclusion in the N and W system was delayed beyond the merger of the Pennsylvania and New York Central.

The decisions cleared the last major obstacle to the creation of the world's largest railroad system. The order takes effect in 35 days and both railroads have said their merger could be consummated by Aug. 1 if there are no further appeals.

Ron Clarke Shoots for World Record Tonight

TORONTO (CP)—Ron Clarke's toughest competitor could be the wind when the Australian goes out to break his world three-mile record at the Ontario centennial international track and field meet here tonight.

Clarke, who holds the record of 12 minutes, 50.5 seconds for the event, says wind is one of the two weather conditions he fears most in competition. The other is the severe heat of the tropics.

"But we won't have to worry about heat here," Clarke said in an interview Tuesday. "The wind is a different matter. I visited the track and it seems excellent, but there seems to be a fair amount of wind down there."

The track meet will be held at the Canadian National Exhibition Stadium, situated on the shore of Lake Ontario. The track is a rubberized all-weather quarter-mile.

"The major problem with running in the wind is that you often have your top competition running in your shade," Clarke said. "He (the opposition) doesn't have to fight the wind like you do. And while you're tiring, he's just coasting along in your wake."

Clarke's major competition is expected to come from Tracy Smith of the U.S. and Gaston

Roeblants of Belgium. Smith holds the world indoor three-mile record of 13:18.2, while Roeblants is the world record holder in the 20,000 metres with a time of 58:06.2.

"I've run against both of them separately during the last few weeks," Clarke said. "This will be the first time I've met both at the same time."

"My main objective will be to win, of course. I'll go right out and try to lose them. Once I do that, I can try to keep up my pace for the record."

Clarke isn't the only one in the race that's hoping for a record.

Smith's coach, Mike Igoli, is also predicting a record for his runner.

The three-mile event is the highlight of the meet.

A number of other international-known athletes, including Bill Crothers of Markham, Ont., Wyoming Tyus of the U.S. and Edwin Roberts of Trinidad will also compete.

Rocks Lose Another, 9-5; Here Tonight

Those will be Dave Unwin's last words to Victoria Shamrocks before they take the floor at Memorial Arena tonight against Vancouver Carlings. Goals are what Shamrocks haven't been getting.

They lost their fourth straight game in the Inter-City Lacrosse League Tuesday, 9-5, to the Carlings in Vancouver.

In the four games they've dropped, Shamrocks have averaged eight goals a contest. Most lacrosse authorities agree you don't deserve to win with fewer goals than 10. (Shamrocks have averaged 10 goals against in their last four games).

Those four losses have dropped Shamrocks from first place to third, and now they're getting perilously close to the re-vitalized New Westminster Salmonbellies.

Tuesday, Vancouver was ahead, 2-1, after the first period and whipped in three quick goals to take a 5-1 lead in the second 20 minutes. Shamrocks came back to 5-3 on two goals while they were shorthanded, but they never got closer than the two-goal deficit for the rest of the night.

Bill Robinson led Vancouver with three goals, and Dennis Nagy scored twice.

LIEBICH PUTS TWO

Ted Liebich paced Victoria with two goals, while Ranjit Dillon had three assists to move two points ahead of teammate Ron Jay in the league scoring race. Jay had one goal Tuesday.

Tonight's game has to rate in the crucial category for Shamrocks. A win will keep them in the thick of the first-place battle, but a loss will allow New Westminster—which now looks capable of beating Couquidam at least once this week—to make it a fight for third spot and the last playoff berth.

Sooke Hotel Outlasts Hillside, 11-8

The bats boomed and thundered at Heywood Avenue Park Tuesday night, and the slap-slap of well-executed fielding plays was missing.

Indeed, you might say it was a free-wheelier.

Eventually, Sooke Hotel beat Hillside 11-8, in a Shuffly McGinnis Softball League game.

Next game: Tonight — Sooke Hotel vs. Carling Place, 7:30 p.m., Heywood Avenue Park.

Eric Walker had four hits in four trips to the plate for Sooke, while Cliff Steensen drove in three runs with a homer and a single. Len Morris and Bob George drove in two runs each.

Merv Johnson thumped a solo homer, and Moe Turner clubbed a three-run home run for the 66ers.

SCORE IS RUNS

But Tuesday they became combustible, rather than bustable, whacked out 17 hits and scored 12 runs to defeat Molsons, 12-3, for their first victory of the season.

Catcher Doug Wilson, just back from California and playing his first game for Red Lions, set the tone in the first inning. Molsons' Bob Lowe singled, then tried to steal second. Wilson cut him down with feet to spare.

STRIKES OUT EIGHT

Pitcher Jeff Hett struck out eight and drove in three runs with three doubles. Harry Scott hit a two-run homer, and Bob Latrelle doubled in two more. Three runs scored on a four-base error. And that was more than enough for Hett and his hungry teammates.

Australia and Britain have indicated a willingness to try the idea, and now the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association has announced it will send an uninvited delegation to the International Federation meeting in Luxembourg July 12.

The delegation will be headed by Robert J. Kelleher of Beverly Hills, an advocate of open tournaments.

Winning White Sox May Break Stanky

Clothes maketh the man, they say. Eddie Stanky thinks they make the ball team.

Stanky, peppercorn manager of the Chicago White Sox, saw his team clothed in victory again Tuesday night and swathed in a one-game lead atop the American League's standings. They bounced back to beat Washington Senators, 6-0, after losing Monday's 22-inning marathon.

The Stanky winning system is based on clothes. He gives them away. He uses money collected in fines from the players—or out of his own pocket—to buy suits.

German Amateurs Prove Big Draw

Hourigan Kickers were operating no shoeing, but now it looks as if they'll be able to buy boots to go with it.

Most soccer followers questioned the sanity of the Victoria and District League team when it undertook to bring Red Salzuflen, a touring West German amateur side, to Victoria for an exhibition game.

"If Kickers have mortgaged their boots for the guarantee, they'll play next season in their bare feet," was the way one follower summed it up.

But that exhibition game comes off tonight at 6:30 at Royal Athletic Park, and Kickers can chuckle a little smugly.

Through its own efforts, the club has sold nearly 500 tickets and the Memorial Arena box office had peddled another 500. There's a sure gate of about 1,000 — at $1.25 a head.

Casper, Boros Second

Favored Palmer Scoffs at Open Odds

By WILL GRIMSLEY

SPRINGFIELD, N.J. (AP)—Arnold Palmer scoffed at odds making him the 6-1 favorite and predicted Tuesday that any of 50 golfers could win the 67th United States open championship.

"I don't know when I've seen an Open that is so open," said the 35-year-old Latrobe, Pa., millionaire. "This isn't a tight, exacting course as in most Opens. The greens are big and tricky."

"It is foolish to designate one man or 10 men as most likely to win."

Palmer, only once a winner but three times a playoff loser in this event dating back to 1955, is the people's and bettors' choice in the field of 135 professionals and 15 amateurs who tee off Thursday over the 7,022-yard, par-70 Baltusrol course.

The unofficial odds place defending champion Bill Casper and the 47-year-old Julius Boros as second at 8-1, followed by Jack Nicklaus, Gary Player and Frank Beard, 10-1; Ben Hogan, Gay Brewer and Doug Sanders, at 12-1.

You can place a wager on the others at anywhere from 15-1 to 200-1. If you like an amateur, you can have Bob Murphy, the Walker Cup star from Nichols, Fla., at 25-1.

Palmer is determined to erase the nagging memory of the 1966 Open at San Francisco when he blew it to Casper after having a seven-shot lead with nine holes to play. He and Casper ultimately tied for the title with Casper winning the playoff.

Palmer, winner in 1960, lost in a playoff to Jack Nicklaus in 1962 and to Julius Boros in another playoff in 1963.

Unburdening himself of some of his business responsibilities, Palmer has snapped back this year to win the Los Angeles and Tucson Opens. He is the year's leading money winner with $91,000-plus already in the bank.

There is Harry P. Cain from Bethesda, Md., a scratch golfer. Dick Dalgas from Redding, Calif., Robert Newton from San Mateo, Calif., Mike Reaser from Inglewood, Wash., and Walker McAlpine from Vancouver Golf and Country Club.

Weeks is the only player in recent years to have been a multi-winner of the Canadian Amateur. The famous Sandy Somerville won it five times between 1926 and 1937, and the late George Lyon holds the record with six wins beginning in 1898.

One of several locals who intend throwing their hats into the ring is the new Victoria amateur champion, Ricky Kent.

Ricky, 21, along with Chi-Chi Rodriguez, is a featherweight with slugging power. His victory in the city amateur was his second in three years, to prove his first performance was no fluke.

A former member of the B.C. provincial junior team, Ricky must be in the reckoning for a place on the Willingdon Cup team, particularly since it is being played on his home course.

If Nick Weeks is an advertisement for old-age golf, then Ricky must breathe the voice of youth. It is appropriate in the city championship that second place was also filled by a youngster. Don Billingsborough of Uplands, who has been knocking at the door for some time, is only 19 years of age. Like Kent he represents high hopes for Victoria's golfing future.

What has turned out to be the key match of the Inter-Club golf championship is being played this evening at Uplands where league-leading Gorge Vale plays the fifth of its six games.

Gorge leads Uplands by 6½ points, so the home club has to come near a clean sweep to stay in contention.

It is more likely, of course, that Gorge will proceed to wrap up a second consecutive title. There is no doubt that it is a solid, well-balanced team.

This week, Gorge will miss Bill Wakeham who, like Vaughan Trapp of Victoria, is away on the Gold Trail, but even so they should be good for enough points to keep them in the lead.

In the other match at Colwood, Victoria has a last chance to avoid the Bigelow putter for the second year in succession. The putter goes to the cellar club, just as the Willie Park driver goes to the winner.

Now that the Royal and Ancient, the USGA and the Royal Canadian Golf Association are together again in the matter of rules of golf, the one lack of uniformity is the ball itself.

In Britain where golf lies are less lush than on the North American continent, and where wind is an ever-present factor, the 1.62 inch diameter ball is preferred to the bigger 1.68 inch ball favored by the U.S. and Canada.

The British have tried the large ball, and they don't want it at any price — and vice versa.

The suggestion again has been made that a compromise should be reached and that a new ball with a 1.63 inch diameter would be acceptable to everyone.

When the Commonwealth players come here in August, they will have the option on which size of ball they will use in the Commonwealth Tournament, but when they play in the Canadian amateur they will have to confirm with RGA rules and play the bigger ball.

Palmer's chief rival for world honors, big Jack Nicklaus, flew a 66. However, he has been in with his family after a week-end at home and talked dourly of his chances.

"Terrible, just terrible," he said, but declined to make any rash predictions.

Frazier, Chuvalo exchange grips

AT THE 19th With Harry Young

If Nick Weeklock comes up with his fifth Canadian Amateur title at Royal Colwood in August, there will be little doubt he will have to rank as one of the greatest Canadian golfers of all time.

The middle-aged gentleman from Brantford now closing in on his 50th year—or perhaps he is past it—has won three of his four Canadian Championships in the last six years.

This in itself is a remarkable feat, and disproves the contention that today a golfer is done when he leaves the thirties.

However, if Weeklock does it this time he will be triumphing in what is perhaps going to be the strongest field in the history of the Canadian championship.

Not only are all the Commonwealth stars from Britain, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa expected to be in the entry, but there is also a much more than usually powerful array from south of the border.

While only a few entries have been received so far, they are all top quality.

There is Harry P. Cain from Bethesda, Md., a scratch golfer. Dick Dalgas from Redding, Calif., Robert Newton from San Mateo, Calif., Mike Reaser from Inglewood, Wash., and Walker McAlpine from Vancouver Golf and Country Club.

"I feel great, but we'll just have to wait and see," he said. "This is a tremendous golf course. Everybody will have fun playing it."

Boros, riding the impetus of his Buick Open victory last week, said he liked the course but wasn't counting on his third Open triumph.

"I'm getting too old," he said. He won his first Open in 1952, sandwiching it between Hogan and Fort Worth.

Prewer, the Masters winner, and Beard both are having good years. Hogan, although 54, has trained hard for this one after a dramatic showing in the Masters and high finishes at Houston and Fort Worth.

NEW YORK (AP)—Heavyweight contenders Joe Frazier and George Chuvalo signed Tuesday for a key bout that could lead to a title but both said they still consider Cassius Clay champion.

The undefeated, 23-year-old Frazier of Philadelphia and the 29-year-old Canadian champion from Toronto will receive a minimum of $50,000 each for their television 12-rounder at Madison Square Garden here July 19.

"We've carefully avoided labeling this as part of a tournament," said Harry Markson, director of boxing for the Garden. "We've got an outstanding match and we hope to match the winner with another outstanding heavyweight."

I don't believe in eight or 10-man tournaments. Tournaments are up to commissions, not promoters."

STILL CHAMPION
"As far as I'm concerned, Clay still is the champion until he is convicted," said Chuvalo, who lost a title 15-rounder to Clay March 28, 1966.

"I agree with George," said Frazier when the question was put to him at a press luncheon. "It's not only George and me. California and several other states still consider Clay the champion."

CLAY ON TRIAL
Clay is scheduled to go on trial in federal court in Houston next Monday on a charge of refusing to be drafted. He is seeking exemption on the grounds that he is a full-time preacher for the Black Muslims.

The winner of the coming fight will have to be considered high in any tournament or any rating of a successor to Clay.

Frazier, winner of all 16 of his pro fights, is ranked second by the WBA and fourth by Ring magazine. Chuvalo is ranked 10th by the WBA now, after being ranked fifth the month before, and fifth by Ring.

NEVER STOPPED
The rugged Canadian's record is 46-13-2, including 39 knockouts. He never has been stopped or floored. Chuvalo has won 11 straight.

The Garden's announcement of a crimp in the plans of Mike Malitz of New York and his recently formed Sports Action Inc. to run an elimination tournament. A month ago Malitz announced a tentative four-bout first round of an elimination tournament with a Chuvalo-Frazier fight listed for either Sept. 2 or Sept. 16.

"SHORT CUT"
Frazier's handlers said they wanted no part of a tournament while Chuvalo's manager, Irving Ungerman, said "a fight with Frazier is a short cut to the top."

What kind of a fight will it be?

"If I'm in there smoking every round," said Frazier. "I'll be in there throwing punches. I'm not going to take a backward step."

"I'll try and cool that smoke," said Chuvalo, speaking after Frazier. "This fight is going to be so good, I'd like to sit back and watch it myself."

LEEDS, England (Reuters)—England defeated India by six wickets Tuesday in the first test here, with 2½ hours to spare.

The Nawab of Pataudi, 21, dismissed for a magnificent 148, was mainly responsible for India prolonging his country's second innings.

The Indians were finally all out for 510, their highest total against England. England then needed only 125 for victory, which it soon achieved.

BOWLING SHARP
Accurate spin bowling by Bhagwat Chandrasekhar and Erapalli Prasanna gave India four wickets before the test ended. With luck and better catching India could have taken more wickets.

India's performance in the last three days was a remarkable comeback for a team which followed on 386 runs behind and was two bowlers short through injury since the first afternoon.

The British have tried the large ball, and they don't want it at any price — and vice versa.

The suggestion again has been made that a compromise should be reached and that a new ball with a 1.63 inch diameter would be acceptable to everyone.

When the Commonwealth players come here in August, they will have the option on which size of ball they will use in the Commonwealth Tournament, but when they play in the Canadian amateur they will have to confirm with RGA rules and play the bigger ball.

The Amalgamated Conservation Society plans a multi-front look at the problems of the Cowichan River system, including 22-mile-long Cowichan Lake.

Bruce Colegrave has been named to head a committee which will investigate flood control proposals, log spraying, deadheads in the lake, and the lamprey problem, among other things.

Co-operation of the Lake Cowichan and Duncan fish and game clubs will be sought.

"There is a man-sized problem developing with a $1,500,000-plus flood control project that has been proposed," warned Howard English. "The project has been worked up by the provincial water resources branch and neither provincial or federal fisheries officials have been consulted," he said.

He said "a tremendous flood control program has been proposed, including a dam at the lake."

"This is something we should investigate. We should write deputy water resources minister A. F. Paget and Recreation Minister Kiernan," he said.

English explained the Cowichan River is the key to most southern Vancouver Island fishing. "The Cowichan is the major producer of coho for the whole southern Island," he said.

He noted that because the fisheries officials have not been brought into the picture yet, "we are already behind. Fisheries studies should have been made by now."

Victoria Fish and Game president Al Playfair was critical of engineers in general. "It is about time we told engineers they will build what we want them to build. They think they know everything and nobody else knows anything. This is just a fallacy," he said.

But Playfair said he wasn't against a dam, "but it must be a proper dam with fish ladders and lamprey control measures."

"Providing a dam is built with fisheries in mind it could be an asset," said English.

"It could be used to get rid of lamprey," said Playfair.

It was observed that an earlier downstream flood control project had been undertaken without proper consideration and with serious consequences for spawning beds.

Colegrave observed that the Cowichan River and Cowichan Lake "could provide a lot of recreation, but it is not being used to its utmost."

He said he had talked to "a fisheries man the other day and he said natural feed in the lake is now below the necessary quantity to sustain fish life for very long. He blamed part of it on log spraying."

Colegrave said four years ago he followed a trail of dead fish in Cowichan Lake following the spraying of log booms.

It was generally agreed that logging companies are co-operating in an effort to clear up the deadhead problem and minimize spraying harm.

"The lamprey problem has been with us for years and years. There never has been a study on them completed," said Colegrave.

He thought lamprey should be eliminated, even if it meant the whole lake would have to be restocked with trout.

The Amalgamated Conservation Society will also look into proposals to use mechanical clam diggers to commercially harvest the razor clams at Long Beach, the only Vancouver Island beach where recreational dig razor clams. A member of the provincial commercial fisheries branch, which is actively encouraging the use of mechanical clam diggers, will be asked to explain the program at the next ACS meeting in the Ingham Hotel July 5.

The Victoria Fish and Game Club will co-sponsor a water safety clinic this summer which will tour Vancouver Island lakes in a bid to bring safety directly to vacationers.

The clinics will feature handling of canoes and power boats, instruction on simple motor problems, piloting hazards, life-saving and resuscitation.

Demonstrations will take about 1½ hours and then instructors will spend five or six hours offering personal advice and instruction on the lakeshore. In the Victoria area demonstrations are planned for Elk, Beaver, Thais and Prospect Lakes. Clinics will be free and open to anyone who wishes to attend.

Baseball Eyes Bernice She's a Good Umpire

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (CP)—When the student umpire hunched behind the plate for the first time Monday, the only problem was squeezing the umpire into the chest protector.

Especially with the fans whistling at the figure in blue. "I'm having a little problem," Bernice Gerta admitted to Jim Finley, the man who trains umpires for organized baseball. "This chest protector just isn't made for my shape."

Bernice's shape starts at a 36 with the other numbers secret but in obvious proportion.

She is in the second of six weeks at Finley's umpire school.

The 35-year-old housewife from Jackson Heights, N.Y., wants to be the first woman to call a major league baseball game.

"First I have to tell her to stop being a woman and be an umpire," Finley said. "When she walks on the field I expect her to act like an umpire."

"She had the habit of carrying on conversations with the players but we broke that by giving her pushups."

The first rule of an umpire is not to chat with the players, Finley explained, prescribing two pushups for the first offence.

Bernice answered every question correctly on a 50-question exam, Finley said. The final test will include 100 questions and passing scores usually average 86 to 98.

"I think this woman has good talent," said Finley. "I don't think they will be able to deny her a job because of her sex. I'm certainly going to see she gets to do some form of umpiring." Finley can be certain of that. He's president of the Umpires' National Baseball Congress.

Judgment Reserved On Assault

Magistrate William Ostler reserved judgment until July 4 in the trial of John George Auld, who is charged with assaulting George John Lennox, causing bodily harm.

Auld, 1354 Pandora, has pleaded not guilty. The trial was held in central magistrate's court Tuesday.

Prosecutor J. W. Anderson said the crown was not going to produce evidence that Lennox died following the fight but the evidence was led after reference was made to evidence given at an inquest.

Mr. Anderson said an autopsy showed that Lennox died of acute heart failure but the cause of the failure was not known.

James Gordon Lennox, brother of the deceased, said his brother had a slight drinking problem but he never saw him get "nasty when in his cups."

Albert Carlow said he was at the Kings Hotel shortly after midnight April 15 and saw two men fighting on the sidewalk. He said he saw Auld knock the other man to the ground and kick him once.

Lennox, whom the witness described as "the other fellow," got up and started to swing. Auld hit him again, knocking Lennox against the hotel. Auld kicked him again, the witness said.

Auld then walked to his car, parked in front of the hotel, and spoke to two men who approached him, Mr. Carlow said.

"The accused picked up the other fellow (Lennox) by the collar, looked at him, put him back on the sidewalk, and walked back to his car," Mr. Carlow said.

To defence counsel Lloyd McKenzie, Mr. Carlow said he was not able to make positive identification of Auld at a police line-up later that day.

Constable Peter Bridgewood said he found Lennox lying in front of the hotel. He rolled him onto his back and found Lennox was breathing convulsively.

"He made three or four deep breaths and then ceased breathing," Constable Bridgewood said.

Officer Felt No Pulse

He could not feel a pulse, Lennox's pupils did not respond to light and there was a small amount of blood by his mouth and chin.

Gordon Bowditch, another witness, said he asked Auld what had happened and was told: "The other fellow got what he deserved."

Mrs. Margaret McDonald said she saw the fight from a car parked in front of the hotel. Both men were not landing any blows, she said, and one fell to the pavement from what she thought was exhaustion.

To Mr. McKenzie, she said they looked like a couple of drunks.

Mrs. Agnes Garraway, a crown witness, was not available and her evidence from the inquest was read into the record.

She also said she did not see any punches land and did not know what caused one man to fall on the sidewalk.

Auld said he did not know Lennox and he went to the Kings after drinking at the Goldstream Inn. He said Lennox came to a table he was sitting at and began talking to him.

In cross-examination, Auld said he left because he thought Lennox wanted trouble.

He said as he walked outside, someone began hitting him and turned to see Lennox kicking at him.

"I told him to stop," Auld said. "I tried to protect myself. I didn't hit him, he fell to the sidewalk. I don't remember if I kicked him. I was so upset."

Mr. McKenzie said there was no evidence of bodily harm and that the overall defence was one of self-defence.

Elizabeth Ewen, 41, of 290 Homer was remanded one week without plea on three counts of theft under $50.

She is charged with stealing money from the City of Victoria on June 5 and May 24. She is employed as a cashier at central magistrate's court. Bail was set at $350.

Dann Koller, 322 Wilson, was fined $50 for careless driving.

Majestic Travellers Revive Sea Dreams

By JIM HOFFMAN

Viewed from the shore, the Kaiwo Maru and the Nippon Maru, with their huge, heavily-rigged masts and square sails, stir up dreams of romance and runaway trips on the high seas.

And if noise, commotion and unexpected activities are the elements of the salt sea adventure mystique, then the Japanese barques currently visiting Victoria are like remnants from the romantic past.

Tuesday, reporters were piloted out in an auxiliary launch to have a preview glimpse of the 300-foot sailing ships, owned by the Japanese Institute for sea-training.

As we approached the Kaiwo Maru, the ropes and masts seemed to be crawling with activity as yellow-hatted, bare-footed sailors, clad in light, loose-fitting garments, wound ropes around wrapped sails, tying them to the masts.

When our launch pulled in to tie with Kaiwo, white-capped officers yelled, sailors yelled back, and dozens of feet scampered down along rope ladders to the deck.

After a quick press conference, which wasn't very enlightening because of the language difficulty, we strolled around the deck and exchanged internationally agreeable grins with the crew.

The ship was towed, the Kaiwo Maru, is a 2,000-ton training ship which, like its sister ship the Nippon, gives a six-month practice in basic seamanship to young students of the Japanese merchant marine.

The 94 cadets aboard the Kaiwo take either a navigation or an engineering class of training.

This represents, for most of them, the last leg in their sea training and they'll go on to jobs as officers in the merchant marine.

The ships' journey to Victoria from Japan took 38 days, with 20 of them under sail power and the rest under diesel power.

It is hoped that while the ships are docked in Victoria, local residents will host members of the two ships. Visit coordinator John Bovey is anxious to have Victorians bring either cadets, sailors or officers to their homes for entertainment. Number to call is the Chamber of Commerce at 383-7181 between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. from today until Friday.

At the promise of a judo demonstration by some of the cadets in training, we rushed to the main deck to watch white-robed, black-belted youths scurrying about as they placed straw mats on the deck.

In a very methodical pattern, the cadets began to grapple each other, give quick turns and flip over an opponent.

The same kind of demonstration, besides displays of karate and kendo, will be given this Sunday by the cadets at 1 p.m. at Royal Athletic Park — accompanied by a concert.

At 2 p.m. there will be a baseball game at the Park against members of local clubs. The Japanese are famed for their prowess at baseball and a good, fast game is expected.

For those who like to watch how the sails are handled — often with 20 men clambering along one mast — there will be a sail drill from 10 to 12 a.m. this Saturday, at the Ogden Point Dock.

The sail drill will be described over loudspeaker by members of the Thermopylae Club.

The two ships will be open to the public from Thursday to Sunday from 5 to 8 p.m. On Saturday and Sunday, they will be open from 2 to 8 p.m. They leave June 20.

Saanich Plans War On Blackberries

An all-out war on blackberries is being planned by Saanich not out of love but for a public works committee.

Coun. William Noel told the committee Tuesday night that blackberries growing on municipal boulevards should be classed as noxious weeds and eradicated at municipal expense.

Committee chairman Leslie Passmore said, "It's O.K. by me, but it will create a big drain on municipal funds."

The committee was told the current policy of Saanich is to not cut boulevards except for a four foot swathe along the road.

Municipal engineer Neville Life told the committee that to alter the present policy and include cutting down blackberries would more than double the present costs.

"We now have two mowers working 10 hours a day, and if every complaint of blackberry canes is answered we'll need two extra mowers going continually."

Dimpled Blonde

Mermaid Legend Taking Shape

A legend of a dimpled mermaid is real, a good many people apparently did see the creature — described as a long-haired blonde with the lower body of a fish or porpoise — was visible on a jutting rock at Helen Point, on the north-west corner of Mayne Island, for more than an hour.

A Cobble Hill man who flew over the area shortly after 7 p.m. managed to get an aerial photograph which corresponded closely to a picture taken from the Queen of Saanich by an active visitor, and published in the Colonist Tuesday morning.

The new picture clearly shows a silvery object on the rock beside the creature. Several witnesses had mentioned that the "mermaid" appeared to be eating a large salmon.

NO ONE STOPPED

Although a number of vessels, including four B.C. government ferries, pass the point during the same time the creature was visible, there were no reports of any attempt at capturing it.

A pair of 10-power binoculars enabled one observer to testify that the mermaid was "a cute blonde with dimples."

"It was definitely a girl," he said. "Definitely."

"The salmon had a big bite out of it. She didn't pay any attention to the boat going by."

He said the mermaid's tail was trailing in the sea.

"She seemed to enjoy the wake of the ferry washing over her," he said.

"Don't mention my name, for heaven's sake," he added. "My boss will think I'm crazy."

Claremont Recovers Lost Time

Students at Claremont senior high school in Saanich have managed to complete their year's work despite a late start last fall, principal Joseph Lott said Tuesday.

"We're finishing all courses," said Mr. Lott, whose school was disrupted last September by a carpenter's contractors dispute which left its renovations half-completed.

Major losers were shop-course students, said Mr. Lott. They will finish their year but have been "shortchanged" on practical work.

'Act Now --- And Fast'

Reeking Ditch Shocks Board

By A. H. MURPHY

A reeking, sewage-filled ditch on Craigflower Road near Admirals caused members of the metropolitan board of health to uncover the big stick Tuesday in the matter of View Royal-Colwood pollution.

"We've got to act now and act fast," said Esquimalt Coun. Arthur Meha.

It was fly-ridden and a "terrible health hazard" and it stank, added the councillor.

Following discussion, the board ordered its senior medical health officer, Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, to take action at once and to back up his action with court charges if necessary.

Dr. Whitbread said the several property owners in the area whose defective sewage disposal systems were said to be responsible for the condition will be required to contain their sewage effluent on their own land, rather than let it run in ditches.

INSTALL TANKS

This could mean they would have to install tanks and haul it away by tank truck to be dumped in a proper sewer.

This was done at Colwood Shopping Plaza following court action.

In addition, the board of health will take space in newspapers to warn mothers of the danger to their children playing in such ditches.

SPECIFIC AREAS

The "unserved" areas where there is danger will be named. Earlier, L. E. Esquimalt, provincial public health officer with the metropolitan board, said that the areas were specifically View Royal, Colwood Corner and Parsons Bridge.

However, Mr. Benham added, these were not the only areas where there was pollution. He cited a list of areas which he said were polluted. It was in Colwood-View Royal areas that there were no plans of any kind for construction of a sewage system.

Some members of the board of health were in favor of posting the ditch on Craigflower and other polluted areas with signs warning of contamination.

'SHOCKING'

The danger of epidemic in the district was forcibly pointed out at an earlier meeting of the board of health by the senior medical officer. It was a very real danger, he said.

Reporting on the Craigflower Road ditch, Coun. Meha said he felt there was a direct responsibility on Dr. Whitbread to do something about it.

"It's shocking to think that a condition such as this exists in 1967," said the councillor. "The effort is flowing directly into Portage Inlet and Esquimalt Harbor, and it is alarming to think of children swimming in it."

No Need for War

Lots of Land Says City Jew

There should never have been war in the Middle East with all the wealth and space available to all nations, Victoria Jewish spiritual leader Charles Kalfon said Tuesday.

Addressing a meeting of the World Federalist's, Mr. Kalfon cited United Nations figures showing that U.A.R. with its 386,000 square miles has little reason to attack Israel with its 8,000 square miles.

"There's lots of space in that area," he said. Mr. Kalfon explained that, by "sweet and blood," the Jews have built up their present state by diligent working of what little they had.

"Before the first pioneers came it was a desert," he said. "no one has given them any gifts — the Arabs could enjoy prosperity too if they would admit the existence of the state of Israel."

Israel could help the U.A.R. as she is helping many African countries by sending experts to help build economies, he said.

Musicians Repeat Honors

Mr. Abbott is a University of Toronto student and will make his fourth tour with the National Youth Orchestra this summer.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: My husband insisted that I write and reply to that woman who signed herself "Lady From Ohio"—the one who had cancer surgery three years ago and lives in constant fear.

I had cancer surgery, too—mine was five years ago, and I had those same feelings. But a dear friend gave me a few lines that have been enormously helpful and I would like to pass them on to "Lady From Ohio."

"Fear knocked at my door," "Faith opened that door," "And no one was there."

LADY FROM INDIANA

Dear Lady: Thank you, on behalf of the Lady From Ohio, and all the others who may find strength in those lines. It's amazing how a few words can get a person through some very dark days. I appreciate your taking the time to share yours.

Dear Ann Landers: A neighbor passed away recently. He was only 55 and an alcoholic. His sisters carried on at the funeral something awful. They wanted to give the impression that they loved their brother dearly and were deeply grieved. Everyone in the family knew he suffered from emphysema. The doctors had warned him repeatedly to stay away from liquor. Yet his sisters served him cocktails when he came to their homes and treated him as if he were normal.

Please tell people the time to help their relatives is when they are alive. It doesn't do any good to weep and wail over a casualty.—FED UP WITH PHONIES

Dear Fed: Who appointed you Judge and Jury? How do you know to what extent the sisters attempted to help their brother? Nothing is so futile (or frustrating) as trying to force help on an alcoholic who refuses to accept it.

No one ever helped a problem drinker by locking up the liquor or pretending there wasn't any around—or by refusing to serve him a cocktail when others in the room are drinking. Such antics make an alcoholic more determined than ever to have his own way.

So please don't be critical of the sisters. What you don't know about this family situation could probably fill a library.

Dear Ann Landers: Seven years ago our marriage would have been voted as the one most likely to succeed. Last week I filed for divorce. My mind is made up, so please don't think I am writing to ask how to save the situation. It isn't worth saving. I didn't say much when he ran around with every chick in town but when he started to bring them home I decided I'd had enough.

Now my question: What should a wife say when her husband announces, "You can have the children but I want the dogs."

Thank you for your help.—NO CLASS CLARA (his name for me)

Dear Clara: Why say anything? Give him the dogs and consider yourself fortunate that he didn't put up a fight for the children. Some husbands do—not because they want the children, but because they want to be punitive. Don't be surprised if you end up with the dogs too. The guy doesn't sound as if he has the maturity to accept any responsibility—not even for the dogs.

Banff Honeymoon

On return from a honeymoon trip to Banff and the interior of British Columbia, newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. Peter Koel Jr. will make their home in Prince George. They were married recently in St. Dunstan's Anglican Church.

Archdeacon Albert E. Hendy officiated at the wedding ceremony for the former Patricia Audrey Blondin, daughter of Mrs. Blondin, 1083 Foul Bay Road, and the late Mr. Norman E. Blondin, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Koel, 515 Cook Street.

Given in marriage by her only brother, Mr. Gary Norman Blondin, the bride was lovely in a floor-length, sleeveless sheath of ligoda crepe over which she wore a floor-length coat of Chantilly lace. Her three-tiered, scalloped veil of silk illusion net misted from a floral headpiece and she carried a cascade of pink Sweetheart roses.

Miss Andrea Schwood as the bride's only attendant was in a short-length, sleeveless gown of pink georgette tulle with bouffant skirt. She wore a matching floral headpiece and carried pink carnations.

Mr. James Troy was best man. Ushering guests to their pews were Mr. Neil Koel and Mr. Paul Postma.

At the reception which followed in the Oak Bay Beach Hotel Mr. Jack Fisher proposed the toast to the bride.

For travelling, the new Mrs. Koel wore a slim fitting dress with navy top and checked skirt. A matching three-quarter length cape and navy accessories completed her ensemble.

A Beauty Hint

Margaret Merrill advises that it is quite simple for every woman to promote an English countryside complexion. Her hint to gain a peach-and-cream loveliness is to damp a cloth with cold water from your refrigerator and press it over your face for a few minutes once or twice a day. Then, to hold the good of the complexion—beautifying cold water, smooth on tropical oil of Olaj. This oil is rather scarce and expensive, but your drug store should be able to get you a small supply.

Donald is hung up on green all shades and all through his collection. The favorite is pale pistachio and he invents a new color combination by using it with chocolate brown.

For most of his daytime clothes he likes big bold woolen patterns that combine pistachio and brown—magnified houndstooth checks, herringbone tweeds and abstract patterns that zigzag over new wools like the northern lights. Matching leggings like children's that cover even the tops of shoes or else knee-covering brown boots go with all the coats and suits.

Hats by Archie Eason, very Robin Hood, are dented felt with long pheasant feathers.

Another of Donald's stunning patterned wools is the llama cloth horizontally striped all over in shades of brown from pale to dark. The fabric feels soft as butter. For his raincoats he uses a pony skin print with big brown spots on white.

Like most designers, Donald likes coat dresses better than suits and he finishes them with the stitched detail Donald Brooks fans love and expect. There are at least a dozen, but one of the favorites is the lentil green.

Into all the din of pattern, Donald inserts a few quiet, sexy black wools. They plunge every which way and the fuller skirts move beautifully.

Donald Brooks looked quite the fashion plate himself when he came out for congratulations. With his taupe-beige suit he was wearing a cobalt blue shirt. It's a riveting shade and, obviously the last word in shirts for men, since designer John Weitz was wearing exactly the same color with a red and black check tie at the Colony for luncheon the other day.

Donald Brooks' new suit of llama cloth striped in shades of brown is worn with matching leggings and a Robin Hood hat.

Lines Around the Mouth

The mouth area comes in for so much attention, the quicker the lines are smoothed out and made to disappear, the younger you will look. A lotion-like substance 2nd Debut applied nightly will make the lines fill in and the skin becomes smooth once more. You will probably use 2nd Debut on your entire face to banish dryness, but do use a little extra care around your mouth. After applying the 2nd Debut massage very lightly, until it disappears into your skin. Your drug or dept. store has 2nd Debut with CEP 600 or CEP 1200 in double strength and you'll find it a genuine delight to use.

Death Leaps Fences

By M. V. CHESNUT

I wrote a piece a week or two ago about the tremendous advances that have been made in the field of chemical control of weeds. Stemming from the simple 2,4-D solution for killing dandelions and plantains in the lawn without injuring the grass, nowadays we have special formulations for controlling tough weeds like clover, chickweed, Creeping Charlie and Speedwell. We have kinds which will kill all weeds and grass under a hedge without injuring the hedge itself, kinds which won't kill ANY plants which are up and growing, but which destroy all seeds in the soil as they sprout.

We have crabgrass killers, couch grass killers, poison ivy killers and total vegetation killers to keep driveways clear of weeds and grass for a full year or more, and there is even a preparation called Reglone for killing pond weeds without injuring fish. What I am concerned about today, though, is the method of application of these weedkillers. It is so easy to control weeds nowadays that we are becoming careless in the handling of a very dangerous chemical; dangerous, that is, to all broad-leaved plants, whether they are weeds or valued occupants of our gardens.

For instance, a lot of folks insist upon applying weedkiller to the lawn with a pump-up pneumatic sprayer, and for my money, this is about the surest way to lose friends and infuriate neighbours. The stuff comes out in the form of a fine mist which will drift out of bounds even in a light breeze, killing expensive plants and shrubs in the gardens downwind from you.

This is getting to be a very common occurrence, and my mail is loaded every summer with reports of mysterious blights which have twisted and distorted the leaves of valuable plants, shrubs, vines and small trees. In almost all such cases, the trouble can be traced to weedkiller fumes drifting in from a careless job of application somewhere in the neighbourhood; with the right kind of wind, it could be almost a block away.

Some plants are particularly susceptible to this kind of damage. Tomato plants, for instance, will curl and distort their leaves at the slightest trace of weedkiller fumes in the air. Grape vines and their ornamental cousin, the Virginia Creeper, are both highly vulnerable, and I lost a treasured lilac and a viburnum all because some lunthead on our street decided to spray his lawn on a windy day.

There is no great trick to applying weedkiller safely. Rather than a fine, misty spray, I favor wetting the leaves with coarse droplets such as you would get from a watering can. Not that I recommend that you use your regular watering can, for it is difficult to decontaminate the can after use, and the slightest trace of weedkiller remains, you could poison your plants while watering them.

It is better, I think, to substitute one of those inexpensive plastic nozzles that fit on the neck of an old one-gallon vinegar jug. If you don't have such a jug, your garden shop will sell you a special plastic jug for less than a dollar. As long as this equipment is reserved for killing weeds and is used for no other purpose, there is no need to decontaminate.

I can't say I am very keen on hose-end sprayers for weedkiller solutions either, for here again, the chemical is delivered as a fine mist which is capable of drifting. Moreover, these applicators are usually held too high for safety; whatever kind of gadget is used, it should deliver the weedkiller close to the ground to minimize the possibility of drift.

In my next column I will discuss and evaluate other methods of applying weedkillers.

Philosophy Stumps JACK SMITH

It's a Young Man's Game

For three weeks I have been trying to renew what was never a very close acquaintance with Hume, Berkeley and Descartes.

But philosophy, like baseball, is a young man's game. I'm swiping too late and too fly balls in the sun. When a man pays taxes, keeps a car and carries a certain blanchette credit card, he is not likely to doubt his own being, and he needs no proof that matter exists.

But our younger son was boning up to take a philosophy final he missed last year. He examined a semester's study into three weeks. Some of it overflowed, and I got my feet wet.

"Would you say," he asked one evening, "that every event has a cause?"

"I suppose so," I said — "at least in the sense that every event follows some other event, without which it couldn't have happened."

"Then what caused the beginning?"

"The beginning?"

"Hume raises the question of whether the beginning of existence had a cause."

"My wife came out of the kitchen. 'Isn't that like which came first — the chicken or the egg?'"

"You stay out of this," I advised. "What's for dinner?"

"The next night it was Descartes."

"Did you ever hear of the saying, 'Cogito, ergo sum?'"

"Cogito, ergo sum? Of course, I think, therefore I am. Everyone knows that."

"You agree with it?"

"Wait a minute," I said. I went to the kitchen and mixed a highball and let the dogs in. I thought they might offer a distraction.

"Do you agree," he asked again — "that the fact that you think proves you exist?"

"Descartes," I said, thinking dimly back to my own philosophy I, "overstated his case. All he needed to say was 'Sum' I am. As Shelley said, 'That is all ye know and all ye need to know.'"

"That was Keats," he said. The next night when I got home I tried to head him off. "The Pirates won," I said. "Clemente got two singles and a double."

He nodded. "What do you think of Berkeley's idea that matter doesn't exist?"

"Just a minute," I said. I mixed a highball and let the dogs in.

"It's nonsense," I told him. "If I bark my shin on this cocktail table, it hurts. I know the table is real and I know I'm real. I hurt. Ergo, Sum."

It seemed to me I had proved both Descartes and Berkeley wrong.

"Dr. Johnson used that argument," he said. "He kicked a rock. Philosophically, it's irrelevant."

"Look at Beau," my wife cried, referring to the large and stupider of her poodles — "he's chasing his tail!"

"That proves he exists," I pointed out, "without thinking."

I got up to put the food dog out and barked my shin on the cocktail table. "Black dangle!" I cursed.

"It's all in the mind," she said. The next night I went straight to the kitchen, but I needed to have —

"The Pirates won again," he said. "Clemente homered in the ninth."

It was over. He had passed the test. That proved he is. Ergo, Sum.

Idiom's Delight

HARRIS SYDNEY

A Cuban refugee living in Miami writes to say that although he has studied both German and French, he finds English much harder than either "because so many words in English have four or five meanings."

This is regrettably true of our language. It is strong, supple, and melodious — but it is not clear and unequivocal. Unlike French, English is a language in which it is often difficult to say exactly what one means.

One reason for this is our super-abundance of idioms. Any tongue that is rich in idioms gains in color and variety, but loses in precision. As L. P. Smith points out in his book, Words and Idioms, the phrase to "go on" can mean to "proceed," to "continue," to "behave badly," and even to "talk volubly."

And even more so, the phrase to "get on" can mean "to mount," "to hurry," "to prosper," "to grow old," or "to be on good terms" with someone. How is the foreigner learning English to recognize which of these meanings is being expressed in conversational form? Our word "take" alone means not only "take," but also sometimes, "give" or "go" or even "make."

The large Oxford Dictionary lists 53 meanings of "take up," and 67 meanings of "set up." And even the small Concise Oxford on my desk gives 30 different uses of the word "make" — such as construct, compose, prepare, cause, result in, establish, get together, conclude, feel, discern, amount to, become, gain, proceed, secure, and many more.

Our little particles of language enable us to say much with little, to engage in a sort of verbal shorthand that can be baffling to foreigners. In describing a great variety of human actions and relations, Smith points out:

"We can take to people, take them up, take them down, take them off, or take them in; keep in with them, keep them down or off or under; get at them, or round them, or get on with them; do for them, do with them, or without them, and do them in; make up to them, make up with them, make off with them; set them up or down, or hit them off."

In English we "beat up" a person when we "beat him down." We also "take" a bath, but where do we take it to? Our language is an idiom's delight, but a student's nightmare.

SHEILAH GRAHAM Talks to Girl in Love

Hayley, 21, Waits for Roy, 54

LONDON (NANA) — Hayley Mills, with Roy and his twin brother John Boulting, will be boarding the Queen Elizabeth on Thursday for New York. She's going there to promote the already very well publicized picture, The Family Way, in which Hayley shows part of what I delicately referred to as "your rear end" while we had afternoon tea in the elegant foyer of the Ritz Hotel. "You mean my bottom," she corrected me, adding, "I believe in calling a spade a spade."

Thus encouraged, I ventured timidly on what I knew was a verboten subject — the possible marriage of the 21-year-old Hayley, whom we have all known and loved since she was an enchanting teen-ager in her early films for Walt Disney, and Roy Boulting, with whom her name has been linked.

There was very little that Hayley could tell me and even less that I could ask. For a simple reason: Roy is in the process of getting a divorce. So until this is all settled, Hayley can say nothing. But when I said, "I have a strong hunch that you and Roy will be getting married very very soon, she looked ready for a piece of wood, touched it hard and said, "I'm superstitious."

I had seen Hayley on Saturday, lunching with Boulting and I told her that it is absolutely impossible to believe that he is 54 years old. She agreed with me and had an interesting explanation for the youthfulness of the man with whom she is so obviously in love. "It's because he's never stopped growing. An awful lot of people when they reach 35 or 45 stop being interested in life; they're not prepared to accept new ideas."

They first met while she was starring for him in The Family Way. He visited her in Singapore while she was located in Pretty Polly, the hilarious Noel Coward comedy for Universal. Roy was at the airport to meet her when she flew back to London. And now they will be on their way to America together, if I were a betting woman, which I am, I would put my money on their getting married as soon as possible after the divorce comes through.

In spite of some of the problems in her personal life, Hayley is extremely happy and, in spite of looking like a baby, which she will until she's an old lady, she is a mature person. "Life is never simple," she assured me. "If you find life simple, you must be simple. Don't misunderstand. I don't feel beset by problems. I feel enormously happy. I feel more sure."

"I used to be so shy. When you go through that awful adolescence, you're so afraid that people will be disappointed in you, so you put on an act, you talk a lot, pretend to be more sophisticated than you are. I must admit, I was embarrassed when I had to stand up, but I had a towel, and you only see some of me, from the back. I can't understand all the fuss. It's ludicrous, hypocritical. How unfortunate to be one of those who think the human body is unattractive or dirty."

A year ago Hayley left the home of parents John and Mary Mills in a suburb of London to rent a furnished apartment in London. "It had nothing to do with wanting to leave my parents. I'd been banking to live alone. I wanted to be independent. I practiced my culinary arts on my 18-year-old brother who lived with me. I had learned the rudiments of cooking when I was at school in Switzerland."

Hayley, who has earned a great deal of money as a top film actress, does not get full control of it until she is 25. "Now that I've reached my majority I must learn to be more responsible." Not too much, I hope. I like her the way she is.

The hardest film ticket to get in London is Ulysses. All that publicity given the picture by Lady Dartmouth, who loathed it without feeling it, certainly is helping the box office take. I asked one of the publicists for director Joe Strick, "Did you ask Lady Dartmouth to hate the picture so badly," and he swore he was innocent. "But I wish I could take credit for it."

Another Company Mines Strathcona

The provincial government has granted a permit for exploration and drilling by Cream Silver Mines Ltd. within Strathcona Park, 18 miles west of Courtenay.

Recreation Minister Kiernan says the permit allows the company to carry out diamond drilling and restricted tunnelling on 66 claims covering about 3,000 acres.

The area where the company will drill and tunnel is not far from Western Mines Ltd.'s operation on Butte Lake.

Western Mines dumps hundreds of tons of tailings into the lake each week and Okanogan River residents are concerned that not only will the beautiful lake area be spoiled, but water used for home consumption will be badly polluted.

"Everything is quite legal," said Cream Silver's president

Frank Lang, from New Westminster. He is also industrial development manager of B.C. Hydro.

"We have all the clearances required from the provincial government."

He said the permit would require revision if he wants to put a mine into production.

Mr. Kiernan said Cream Silver has an unchallenged right to mine silver in the park, subject only to government guidelines. He would not be surprised to learn that other potential mines are in that Class B area.

He said the Cream Silver claims, although recent, have been allowed because of a number of mineral and timber interests.

Cream Silver plans to send geophysical equipment into the area next month. It is financed by a recently approved sale of 200,000 shares at 50 cents each.

Minister Kiernan added that he would not be surprised if there is even more mining exploration in the park coming up.

He said there are more than 100 claims in the same area staked out by a variety of organizations.

Parking to Be Key

Plans for Nanaimo: 'A Unique City'

NANAIMO — Half a million dollars could make Nanaimo one of the unique cities of the continent and a six-man committee has been struck to attempt this.

Frank Ney, Floyd Warner, Hal Burns, Norm Graham, Andy Wokinski and Earl Fletcher will meet in two weeks with concrete proposals for an all-encompassing parking plan which will be presented to city hall.

TWO BLOCKS

The plan would provide parking within a two-block walk from any store in the Commercial-Terminal area.

Mladen Zorkin, explaining a mid-section parking plan, said no city on the continent had parking much closer than a six-block radius from city centre.

He said it would be unexpected to find parking every second block.

Mr. Zorkin's information was on behalf of an eight-merchant association which had, two weeks ago, announced their intention to ask city council to support the purchase of a five-lot area between Wallace Street and Terminal Avenue, just south of the overhead bridge.

PAVING

The project, complete with paving and retaining walls on Wallace Street, would cost $250,000.

Mr. Ney estimated that another $250,000 would provide the two extra areas for the north and south ends of Commercial Street.

"Progress for everybody, no just the centre of town," he said, expressing the feelings of the merchants.

STILL WAITING

"If it hadn't been for the centre of town, you'd still be sitting on your behinds waiting," countered Mr. Burns, chairman of the eight-merchant association.

"I think of the whole city, not just individual cash registers," said Mr. Warner.

Marijuana Charge

NANAIMO — A 33-year-old itinerant, Murray Leighton MacDonald, appeared in magistrate's court Tuesday on a charge of possessing marijuana, hemp seeds from which the plant is grown, and a pipe in which to smoke it.

He appeared in court Monday on a charge of driving while intoxicated by a liquor or drug.

The second charge was levied by Nanaimo RCMP after investigating the first.

He was remanded until June 21 on $200 bail for the impaired driving count.

Magistrate Eric Winch remanded MacDonald until July 11 on the second charge, for which he ordered no plea.

Bail was set at $1,200. Earlier, RCMP asked for $1,000 bail on the marijuana charge.

Strong Pull

CAMPBELL RIVER — It was a case of the "Young man and the Sea" when 15-year-old Michael Morgan was towed into port with his catch, a 150-pound halibut.

Michael and a companion, Bruce Whyte, 14, were each in a rowboat fishing for small cod when Michael hooked the halibut.

He tried to haul in his line, but the huge fish towed him nearly half a mile from shore.

Bruce towed his pal back to the dock after the fish gave up the struggle.

Wilson Tussles With Team Over Security

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Wilson clashed Tuesday with a Privy Councillor team headed by Lord Justice Radcliffe with two former defence ministers—Labor MP Emanuel Shinwell and Tory MP Selwyn Lloyd—as members.

MPs could not recall in recent years such a simultaneous publication, with the government flatly contradicting important advice offered to it by eminent investigators of its own choice.

The issue was expected to boil up into a full-scale row. Lord Radcliffe found that although the article, written by Chapman Pincher, defence correspondent of The Daily Express, contained a number of inaccuracies, it was not inaccurate in any sense that could expose it to hostile criticism.

The government, however, adhered firmly to Wilson's words in the Commons in February that the story was "sensationalized and inaccurate."

Convictions Reversed By Cleaner

MONTREAL (CP)—Thanks to a cleaning woman at Montreal's courthouse, about 40 persons found guilty of various offences in municipal court have won their Superior Court appeals by default.

The woman, following her normal cleaning routine, simply threw the 40 or so files in the trash can. In the space of a few seconds she reversed all the convictions for theft, receiving, hit-and-run and other offences.

The municipal court files had been transferred to Superior Court following appeals by the convicted persons.

The files went to a Superior Court justice who had just moved into a new office. He left the files on his desk, not knowing the cleaning woman had instructions from the previous occupant of the office to remove anything left on top of his desk.

The woman, following her instructions faithfully, cleared the top of the desk, thereby establishing the legal innocence of the appellants.

LONGVIEW, Wash. (AP) — Traffic ground to a halt on U.S. Highway 530 about 30 miles west of Longview Monday when the submarine tender USS Sperry plowed into the highway, breaking pavement and knocking down power and telephone lines.

The 530-foot Sperry was making its way down the Columbia River enroute from the Portland Rose Festival to San Diego when its pilot lost steerage, the 13th Naval District headquarters said.

NOW HEAR THIS!

Witnesses said sirens were screaming and the ship's public address system was blaring an alert to the crew as the vessel sliced through the muddy bank near the little town of Seila and came to rest after chopping out half the pavement.

The navy said the Sperry was aground for about two hours before backing off and proceeding down the river. The ship was not visibly damaged, the navy said.

Covered with Sheep Droppings

Island 'Filthy' Boater Says

By NANCY BROWN

Princess Margaret Island is in a "filthy state" and getting worse year by year, according to a boat owner who has anchored in the bay, and picnicked on the island for several years.

Mrs. G. F. Dunlop, 877 Ellery Street, said Monday she had visited the island for the first time this year, the previous day.

"It was filthy — sheep droppings everywhere. There's a fence there too, with barbed wire along the top — if it's a public island, then it should be made fit for the public," she said.

IN JULY, 1958

Princess Margaret Island, between North Saanich and Salt Spring Island, was presented to Princess Margaret in July, 1958, during her visit to mark the provincial centennial celebrations.

The idea was that if she were to accept it the island would be renamed from Portland Island in her honor, and with her consent developed as a provincial marine park.

NOT DEVELOPED

The following year Premier Bennett said that the island would not be developed as a public park.

In 1962 royal assent to the development was sent out from Clarence House, London. The conveyance of the land to the B.C. government has also been received.

BOATERS UPSET

Last year small boaters were upset when sheepman Bert Elliott erected a fence near the highwater mark on the island's only suitable mooring cove.

The boaters claimed the fence prevented weekend and overnight camping.

REAL BEAUTY SPOT

Mrs. Dunlop said that, when she first went to the island it was a "real beauty spot."

"Year by year I've watched it get more and more run down," she said. "I can't just watch it any more without trying to do something about it."

Goggle-eyed travellers aboard four B.C. ferries reported seeing real, live mermaid perched on rock at west entrance to Active Pass Monday evening. George Harrison of Sioux City, Iowa, managed to get picture from deck of Queen of Saanich, which passed some distance from rock. Several witnesses said mermaid had large fish, apparently coho salmon, and one swore she had taken bite out of it. Long, silver-blond hair and topless condition were generally agreed upon.

Esquimalt Committee

Fire Tests Kept Secret

Reporters were turned away again from Esquimalt's A committee meeting Monday.

The fire, finance and planning and zoning committee was open May 15 for the first time this year but the wraps were on again this time.

Coun. Gerald Horne said his fire committee would discuss exams for firemen, in which some of Esquimalt's fire-police-men are competing for the position of fire officer.

Coun. Walter Locke said his finance committee had only one item on the agenda. It involved an outside interest and would not be brought up at a council meeting.

The planning and zoning committee, according to chairman Coun. Roy Elphick, had nothing on its agenda.

New Look Likely

Sidney's town council voted Monday to take a further look at proposed amalgamation with North Saanich.

The council delegated Mayor Arthur Freeman to meet North

Saanich authorities and set up a meeting of the two councils to discuss whether a comprehensive two-council study of amalgamation should be undertaken.

City Boy Drowns

An eight-year-old Victoria boy died Tuesday night two hours after he was found floating face downward in Beaver Lake.

his foster home, was the object of a search when he was missed from a group of five boys spending the afternoon at the lake with welfare worker William Lawson.

Blondin, 24, of 708 Sutfolk, overheard a conversation in which one of the boys mentioned Minder was missing. "I offered to help with the search," said Mr. Blondin, a

Unity Negro Goal While Riots Recur

SUFFERN, N.Y. (UPI)—The chief leaders of the U.S. Negro civil rights movement Tuesday night ended a two-day closed meeting on ways of unifying the movement.

No statement followed the meeting, which came as rioting flared in several cities. Delegates included Rev. Martin Luther King and officials of the NAACP, CORE and other groups.

In Washington, President Johnson said his administration is trying to hold down racial tensions "but we have to rely principally on the good judgment of the people themselves."

TROOPS CALLED

In Cincinnati more than 800 Ohio National Guardsmen were called out Tuesday night to quell racial disorders in that city and outlying areas.

The troops were called in after disturbances spread over a wide area of the city and into suburban Norwood, and at least six persons were reported injured.

During the early part of the rioting police arrested two men. A crowd charged the police and the prisoners escaped.

ARSON BLAMED

In Tampa, Fla., arsonists set fires at three buildings and a lumber yard in Negro areas Tuesday night within hours after Sheriff Malcolm Beard "took a chance" and pulled out National Guard troops and police reinforcements, the fire department said.

Beard said he took the withdrawal action after meetings with several hundred Negro residents who promised there would be no trouble if extra police were removed.

WATTS CALM

Calm returned to the predominantly Negro Watts district in Los Angeles, after a night in which 500 Negroes threw rocks and bottles at firemen fighting a $25,000 fire.

While the area appeared quiet, police were keeping an eye on it.

New Wilson Man Rhodesia-Bound

LONDON (UPI)—Prime Minister Wilson announced Tuesday Britain will try again to reach a settlement with Rhodesia on the independence issue.

He is sending former Conservative Commonwealth minister Lord Alport to Salisbury in a few days to study the possibility of new Wilson talks with Premier Smith. Alport cannot negotiate but simply will say if talks that might settle the matter are possible.

Smith said last week time was running out. He expects to receive in August a report of a constitutional commission which seems certain to recommend Rhodesia become a republic.

And There Went Old Ball Game

LIMA, Peru (Reuters)—A nude young lady crossing a road caused a blackout in a northern Lima suburb, it was reported Tuesday.

The newspaper La Prensa, which makes the claim and has a picture to go with it, says a car swerved and crashed into a utility pole when the girl crossed the road.

The suburb was blacked out. One of two volleyball teams playing nearby abandoned the game to search a nearby corn field, and lost by default. It also failed to find the girl.

La Prensa's photograph shows a nude fleeing across a corn field.

Mideast Shift Fought at UN

RUSSIA STALLED

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—A Russian drive for an emergency session of the UN General Assembly on the Middle East crisis has been stalled by the Western Big Three, it was learned Tuesday night.

Informed sources said the United States, France and Britain told Secretary-General U Thant they objected to the Soviet move because the council has been unanimous in all resolutions passed so far on the Middle East crisis and there is therefore no legal basis for claiming that the council is deadlocked.

FORCING EFFORT

The Western move was seen as an effort, before any assembly session, to force a vote in the Security Council on a Soviet motion demanding the condemnation of Israel as an aggressor and the unconditional withdrawal of Israeli forces from all occupied Arab territory.

The motion would certainly be defeated and the Soviet Union would clearly be going to the assembly because it had been beaten in the council.

NOTHING FURTHER

It was learned that, on legal grounds, Thant has held up action on the Soviet request for an emergency assembly session. It was understood no further steps would be taken until there is a decision in the council.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko requested the session in a letter to Thant under article 11 of the UN charter. It states that "any general assembly may discuss any questions relating to the maintenance of international peace and security brought before it... by the Security Council."

COUNCIL DECISION NEEDED

Thant is said to have been told by his legal advisers that action under this article requires a formal decision by the council.

Gromyko declared in his letter that the 122-country assembly "should adopt a decision designed to bring about the liquidation of the consequences of aggression and the immediate withdrawal of Israeli forces behind the armistice lines" of 1949.

The communication started rumors that Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin might attend an emergency meeting of the assembly.

LEADING STATESMEN

The Gromyko letter to Thant said the Soviet government would send a delegation "including leading statesmen of the Soviet Union."

Gromyko normally would be expected to come to such a session, but diplomats believed he would not use this expression to describe himself.

If Kosygin should come, this would raise another question: Would the Soviet leader see President Johnson of the United States?

RESIST PRESSURE

In the Security Council, the Soviet Union reinforced a demand that Israel withdraw unconditionally.

But Israel reaffirmed to the council its determination to resist pressure for an unconditional withdrawal.

Israeli envoy Mordecai Kidron denounced the Soviet motion as "destructive in intent, designed to restore the conditions of belligerence of blockade, of armed clashes, of sabotage and murder," with which Israel has had to contend since its creation in 1948.

SESSION ENDED

The General Assembly ended a special session Tuesday on the question of South African rule of South-West Africa and UN peacekeeping procedures.

Diplomatic observers said the emergency session requested by the Soviet Union could therefore take place without delay.

As soon as Ambassador Nikolai Fedorenko transmitted his government's request to U Thant, the secretary-general began asking all 122 member countries whether they agree to an emergency session.

Sixty-two countries must agree before such a session can take place. If and when Thant gets a 62nd affirmative reply, he must convene the session within 24 hours.

The Soviet motion, a revised

Moscow Urges Global Canal Control

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A Soviet proposal to put all the world's major waterways, including the Panama Canal, under international control is being considered by U.S. state department planners, Congressional sources said Tuesday.

The Kremlin reportedly broached the plan to counter Israel's demand for free access to the Suez Canal, the Straits of Tiran and the Gulf of Aqaba. Israel is expected to demand unrestricted access to these waterways in the wake of its military victory over the Arab states.

Some Congressmen said the U.S. would probably be less reluctant than ever to give up Panama Canal control, since a new treaty on operations is being negotiated with the republic of Panama and major U.S. concessions are likely.

Russia reportedly will demand international control not only for the Suez and Panama canals, but also for the Kiel canal, Dardanelles, Danube River, Kattegatt and Skagerrak waterways and Malacca Straits separating Malaysia and Sumatra.

Gifts for War Victims Far Out of Balance

TORONTO (CP)—Two Toronto organizations put the Mideast war in perspective Tuesday when they announced their gifts to aid war victims in the Arab lands.

The Canadian Arab Committee announced $2,000 has been sent to the Red Cross for such work. The Israeli Survival Fund announced the first day's receipts of a Toronto campaign to buy medical supplies has been sent to Tel Aviv—$5,000,000.

Canada Votes No

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada would not support any UN resolution denouncing Israel as the aggressor in the Mideast war, Prime Minister Pearson told the Commons Tuesday.

He also said Canada, which is handling British affairs in Egypt due to a break in their diplomatic relations, will investigate reports four British cargo ships are stalled in the Suez Canal.

Johnson Mideast Advice: Let Things Clear Up

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Johnson said Tuesday the best course in the Middle East is "To let things clear up and let the people of the area and the world realize what has happened."

After that "we will be examining the viewpoints of all concerned," the president told his first news conference since the Israel-Arab war exploded.

Johnson again pledged U.S. policy to supporting the territorial integrity of all nations in the Middle East but said "how this will be effectuated will be determined by events, in the days ahead."

"I think the people of the world should know that uppermost in my mind... in our people's minds, is trying to help people get along with their neighbors and each other," he said.

Johnson made these other points:

● The use of the hot line between the Kremlin and the White House saved time in the transmission of messages during the crisis, but except for this he did not see "a great deal of difference between this and ordinary communications."

● He declined to commit himself on whether the Arabs and Israelis should conduct face-to-face peace negotiations without outside participants.

● He would not predict whether a recent lull in ground fighting in Vietnam might signify an improvement in Soviet relations. "The fighting goes up and down, depending on a good many factors," he commented.

Bobby

Kennedy Target Of Arabs

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—Bobby Kennedy, not Lyndon Johnson has become the chief target of Arab jibes at the UN during the Security Council debate on the Mideast crisis.

Saudi Arabia's Jamil Baroudy, during his emotional attack Sunday on the American affinity for "Mammon," lashed the New York Democratic senator as an "upstart" and "son of a whisky merchant."

Tuesday, Jordan's Mohammed El Farra added of Kennedy:

"How can we find excuse for American politicians who aim at cheap political gains — for an American of high future ambitions who, instead of adopting the American sense of fairness, intervenes in the political affairs of 13 Arab states in an obvious attempt to accommodate the so-called Jewish vote?"

Everyone 'Loser' In War

From UPI, AP

LUXEMBOURG — U.S. Secretary of State Rusk sparked the first day of the NATO foreign ministers' annual spring meeting by saying flatly "everybody was a loser" in the Mideast war.

He urged an end to the "spiral in arms deliveries" there as a critical element for lasting peace.

Canada's External Affairs Minister Martin told the meeting direct talks between Israel and her Arab neighbors will solve the crisis. He said these negotiations should be "reinforced by UN pressure."
